

THE OUTRAGED EDITOR.

By my special penitentiary, and I looked up in surprise. From the proofs I was correcting, and he caught my angry eyes. His appearance was against him, as he stood before the fire. Of convivial complexion and irregular attire. I hesitated, midday, that I hadn't room for horns. And that nothing was more precious than the time of editors. Then he grimly smiled and nodded, with his head on an incline, asking if "mangled" my contributors, was Imogene Vantyne.

CHAPTER XXIV. A SHOT FROM AMBUSH.

Several days later. Two forms stood in the shadow of some trees not many rods from the great house at Lone Hollow. "It seems so strange that a cloud should have come between us, Austin," said Grace, as she leaned confidently against his shoulder and glanced up into his brave, dark eyes. "There is perfect trust now, darling," returned the young mechanic. "I was to blame entirely."

"How can you get more," queried Grace. "I was the only one present save the Captain and lawyer Gripes." "Well, we must find more evidence," declared the young mechanic. "I will consult with our mutual friend, Louis Fingal. He is wise and keen; between us all I believe we shall be able to outwit Captain Starbright and his soundly lawyer. Circumstantial evidence can be brought in. The forged signature, of course, is not likely to be an exact counterpart of Mr. Vandible's orthography, and that will count for a good deal. We have two weeks in which to work, in which time much can be done."

too black in the way of crime that he will not do to gain what he seeks. That man must be watched. I have not seen the will left by Morgan Vandible, but I know its contents from one who has read it, and it is so worded as to leave every thing to Captain Starbright should Grace die or marry another. Depend upon it, Austin, it was a hand hired by the Captain that fired the bullet at Grace to-night."
