CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Cough, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 829 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

MAUMEE MUSINGS.

Now we have it! What? Why, a first class club room to be sure. A number of our young gentlemen, desiring to ape the customs established by the city dudes have established a club room and now our city has within its charm, ed circle a "Robber's Roost?" so named, I am informed, by a number who have quietly made observations about the premises.

 Mrs. Calab Root spent Tuesday in Toledo.
 Jas. Gibson was over to the Green on Wednesday.
 Well, Lime City, so you think you will become a suburb of Toledo some where in the 3000. I hardly think you took a birds-eye prospect of this part of Ohio, before you wrote that prophecy. You see down here is Bradner, a town of prodigious size, nearly in the center of the "go off itself" (nitro-glycerine) country which is growing very rapidly and as large towns always grow towards each other I think it will be so in this case. Now you see these two towns will meet probably as early as somewhere in the 4000's and as Lemoyme is about half way between we think when the two cities collide it will be about here, and as that will bring us in the center why of course our little town will be the heart of this great metropolis then. But sister city, what is your opinion of Stony Ridge which is situated just between? I think they are on to the situation of affairs and are a little frightened now and are beginning to die off as we have not heard from their correspondent for the last two or three weeks.

Demorest. Physical culture! What is physical culture? The present aim and the certain result of this new "fad" include the attainment of good health and a fine form; and a fine form outranks a pretty face in the popular estimate of physical beauty. Who is not willing to make some effort for such a desirable attainment? It is not so difficult, after all,—if you only know how; and if you want to know how, you may learn from the April number of DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, which contains a splendid article on "Physical Culture," by Prof. E. B. Warman, A. M., giving a course of exercises, profusely illustrated, which will help everybody—man, woman or child—to acquire a graceful, supple form, and without going to a gymnasium, or even spending a cent for apparatus.

And this is not the only attraction of this excellent number of this excellent magazine: "The Land of our Next Neighbors," "Care of Palms in the Drawing-Room," "How Art Students Live in New York," "Grotesque Ways of Decorating Easter Eggs," "Kite-Flying (for the boys), all handsomely illustrated, several capital stories, a fine article on "Thinness: Its Causes and Cure," by Susanna W. Dadds, M. D., are a few of its other features, and there are nearly three hundred illustrations, including a full page water-color Easter card. As an all-around "family" magazine, this one cannot be beat: there is something in every number for father, mother, and every one of the children; and it is only $2 per year. Published by W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 15 East 14th Street, New York.

Seventeen Guns.
 As the funeral cortege would slowly on its way toward Arlington last Tuesday, bearing with it the body of the late admiral of the navy, a far-off booming of cannon was heard down the Potomac. Seventeen times in solemn succession the sound reverberated. Then, as silence settled down upon the waters of the Potomac, a naval officer, in full dress uniform, standing on the bridge leading to Arlington, turned to a companion and remarked:
 "That is in all human probability the last time we shall ever hear that salute. That sequence of seventeen guns, the honors paid an admiral, will never be heard until the rank of admiral is revived, which will never be, unless this country becomes engaged in actual warfare, when necessity may cause the creation of the office of admiral again." The greater honor rested upon Admiral Porter, in that only two men ever bore the title. Farragut was the first admiral in the American navy, Porter the second and last.

A Present for Every Bride.
 For twenty-three years "The Householder" has been a welcome card in the hands of thousands of American homes, and has been, during these years, the companion and help of the American housewife.
 In order that the brides of the country may have the benefit of the visits of this, the oldest household publication in the country, the publishers offer to send "The Householder" to all brides of six months or less, who will themselves, or their friends, send ten two-cent stamps with printed notice of their marriage in the small letter.
 This is a very tempting offer, and they call it their "Wedding Present," which they offer to every bride in the United States on the above terms.
 "The Householder" has just made three very striking offers to the three subscribers who shall obtain the three largest lists of new subscribers between March first and August first. These presents are nothing less than a $500 Horne and Goddard Rug, a Miller Upright Piano, in either Mahogany, Oak, Walnut or Flanoed case, and a Columbia Bicycle for either lady or gentleman's use.
 The March number of "The Householder" contains illustrations and descriptions of these elegant presents, and can be found in all stands or will be sent by the publishers, on receipt of ten cents by the Household Company, 30 Bowdoin St., Boston.

Life of General Sherman.
 No literary announcement of the year is of greater interest to the general public than that of a comprehensive Life of General Sherman, which is about to be published through agents by the noted house of E. R. Curtis & Co. of Cincinnati, O. and Boston, Mass. Admirable biographies of Grant, Sheridan, complete to the time of their death, are already familiar to the public, but a life of the third great commander, to finish the series, has been lacking. The various biographies of Sherman hitherto published have necessarily been incomplete, and even his own memoirs, written in 1857, said almost nothing about his intensely interesting early life, and not a word of course, of the more than twenty years of social activity and fraternity with old comrades since the war.
 The work which is now to be issued will speedily supply the widely felt demand for a history of the great strategist, and it will be a man of fine literary attainments, who knew Sherman better than any other, who can give him the living, and ranked next but one to him in the army, and by Willis Fletcher Johnson, whose ability as a historian is familiar to the reading public of America through his former unusually popular works, which have had millions of readers, and the sales of their vast editions curried an array of book agents. That this history of Sherman, the last of the great generals, will surpass all others in popularity is not to be doubted.

The story of this great General's career is of a marvelous march from the mountains of time to the sea of eternity. Of the three great war heroes, Sherman was by far the most interesting personality. He was the best known to the public and the best loved for his genial disposition and warm, open, and the popular heart. He has joined his illustrious compeers in the eternal life of the dead. He is a life to study—and in a profound inspiration. The forthcoming volume will tell the whole story of his marvelous career, and from the authority engaged upon it, we are assured it will be told in a way that will enthral the attention and interest of every reader from first to last. It is a book every American will want and one every youth should read. It will doubtless be the best life of the great chief published, and we predict for it wonderful popularity. See display ad. in another column.

How Prices of Farm Products are Determined.
 The size of the crop is the thing that determines the size of the prices. There is a demand for a certain amount of farm products from year to year, and the rise or fall as the supply sinks below or goes beyond this demand. The theorists may talk as such as they please about other influences, but the question is at last only one of quantity. The world must have so many bushels of grain per year, and it will pay there for simply so much as it is obliged to considering the available surplus. There is no process of legislation by which additional sales can be forced when the demand has once been supplied; it is not in the power of Congress to compel purchasers to take more than they want, or to give more than they are willing to pay. The fact that the crop of a given year is in excess of the measure of consumption cannot be concealed. It is known every where, and prices are adjusted accordingly. When the crop is short, the same rule applies, and the markets are correspondingly affected. If the farmers could manage to produce only enough each year to meet the demand, they would always obtain just and fair prices. It is overproduction, in other words, that puts prices down for them, and they cannot expect to have prices kept up for them under such circumstances by any sort of artificial force.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
