SWITCHMEN WORK LONG HOURS

New York.—Testifying before a federal arbitration board, railroad switchmen cited instances where they had worked 14 and 15 hours a day and fell asleep after eating lunch, causing them to lose their jobs when they failed to return on time. One Michigan Central switchman, employed at Detroit, stated that by working three hours a day overtime he is able to bring his earnings to a basis where he can support his family. He asserted that some switching crews work 16 hours a day, 10 hours elapsing sometimes between lunch and the evening meal.

F. D. Reid, employed at the Chicago terminal of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, declared that he had seen a switchman crying because of long hours of exposure to the cold. Reid asserted the man was "strong and husky," and that icicles had formed on his eyebrows, which interfered with his sight and increased the danger of his work.

T. J. Hanrahan, yard conductor for the Nickel Plate railroad, at Cleveland, told the board that when the eight-hour plan was tried on that road it took seven additional crews to put it in force, but more cars were handled and at less cost than in previous years.
