There are plenty of fellows who could teach a better school than those who teach, preach a better sermon than those who preach, who could run a better business and publish a better paper. Yes, the woods are full of them, but they neither teach, preach, run a better business or publish a better paper. They are like the lilies of the field, they toil not, neither do they spin.

An exchange says that if a man had a fifty dollar pup he would look after it carefully and not let it have the run of the town day and night. But if he has children it is different. They are turned loose at a tender age to go where they will and do what they please. People wonder where the great army of tramps, dead beats, gamblers and disreputable women come from. They are germinated from the seed gathered in countless homes and sown broadcast upon the streets of our cities and towns. There are thousands of children who are heading in that direction who, as far as care is concerned, are not given equal showing with a valuable pup.

BRINGING UP CHILDREN

The Toledo Bee made the following comment on the meeting of Police chiefs in Washington: Chief Behrendt, of Lansing, Mich., caused some tongue-wagging at the pow-wow of police chiefs in Washington the other day when he said that if the mothers of the country paid more attention to their daughters there would be fewer women in the underworld. As a twig is bent the tree is inclined. What is your theory of twig-bending? Once on a time there was a parent who believed that the way to rear children was to rule them by fear. The pet weapon of discipline in that home was a lath with a nail in it. When a young one did something that the parent didn't like, out came the lath and there were threats of an awful punishment. Result: One child, a daughter, ran away with a good-for-nothing. One son became a souse. Another son got away from home as soon as he could and under the guidance of a kindly uncle became a fair sort of a man. The lath and nail policy didn't score a single victory. You've no doubt met mothers who are always fibbing to their offspring. If they're going out to spend an evening, they don't say so frankly; they try to make the little ones believe that the absence is to be only for a moment, only while they go around the corner. How does this policy work? Isn't it true that in the majority of cases the children find out that mother didn't tell the truth and decide that if mother can fib, they can, too? Then, again, there is the policy of over-fondness, of spoiling indulgence. You know what that produces children selfish and self-willed, nuisances when young and quite likely to become rascals or menaces when grown up. Just about as bad, judged by results, is the policy of continual nagging; of don't do this and don't do that, don'ts multiplied so habitually that none have any meaning and the only consequence is a break down of parental discipline. For children, like older folks lose respect for eternal naggers and fault-finders. Can you blame them? Chief Berendt does a timely service in putting a whole lot of the responsibility for girls going wrong on careless or incapable mothers. The host of flirty young snips on every city street during the summer evening promenades, most of them bedaubed with paint and powder and reckless in their pursuit of a mythical good time offer living proofs that many mothers are shirking their job. We don't know that we've a patent prescription for bringing up children. It's pretty much an individual problem. But if you think back to what you liked best in your own childhood and apply its lesson to your children, we guess you won't be likely to go very far wrong. You liked kindness and truthfulness and appeals to your honor best, didn't you? And down in your heart you pretty generally knew that however much it hurt, discipline given sadly but firmly for a misdeed as to which you had been fully warned was not only deserved but also was a means of adding to your respect for the trusted one who administered it.

The work of oiling Front Street is now completed and is done in a much better manner than heretofore. The dressing is of asphalt oil and is so applied that it will be only a few days until it is well dried and will then prove a certain dust reducer and will keep the street in much better condition. The work was done under the personal direction of T. M. Farmer, the Toledo Manager of the Standard Oil Company, and Tom made a special effort to have the work well done.

Farmers who have been in the habit of paying their help at the end of the season, when the crops were settled for, must pay twice a month hereafter. All other people who hire help of any kind must pay twice each month. The new law recently passed by the legislature is very specific on this point, and there is no getting around it in any way by any side agreement, as the terms of the enactment are very specific indeed, and admit to no other constructions.

The Smallest Shop Best Lighted

will do more business than a large store poorly lighted. The new G.E. MAZDA Economy Diffusers make it possible to flood small business places with electric light at a very small cost. The light from these new lamps is so brilliant, and is so perfectly diffused that often only one cluster is needed. The turn-down switch gives just the degree of light desired. You will be interested in the terms we can offer you on these lights. Ask about them.

Imported Draft Horses

EMPEROR AVECHURCH
I have on my farms 2 1-2 miles west of Perrysburg, on the River Road, a very fine assortment of imported, registered Belgian and Shire mares and stallions. The mares are all with foal from high grade registered English and Belgian Stallions. They are all very nicely acclimated and are as good breeding stock as can be found in the country.

Combination Riding and Driving Horses WELSH PONIES

I also have some combination riding and driving horses which took prizes at the CHICAGO HORSE SHOW last November. Also some very fine WELSH PONIES with English harness and carts.

All of these are offered for sale at very low prices, considering the high quality of the stock.

Also have a smaller type Shire Stallion. Fee, $12.00.
W. J. LEWIS
Lewis Manor Farms, Perrysburg.

They are strongly built, heavily muscled, wide of chest, clean flat bone, and all-round prime blooded stock. There are none better for breeding purposes. It costs no more to raise good stock than common grades. Therefore why not have the best. To appreciate the beauty, weight and strength of these animals you must see them on the farms. The STALLIONS (Belgian and Shire) will be for service until sold. FEE $20.00 to insure.
