A well known artist tells of an amusing colloquy in an art gallery where two young women were viewing a copy of Millet's "Gleaners."

One of the young women was carried away by her enthusiasm. "How beautiful! How wonderful! What art!" she exclaimed. "Above all, how natural!"

Then after a pause she said: "But what are those people doing?" Drawing near to read the title, she was enlightened. "Oh, now," she added, "I see! Gleaning millet. How wonderful! How beautiful!"

LACE INDUSTRY IN VENICE

Process is So Simple It Looks Like Child's Play, But Brings Thousands of Dollars Annually.

The lace of Venice has been celebrated for many centuries. It was made originally by nuns within the walls of convents for ecclesiastical garments. Then, with the fall of the Venetian republic, the convents were closed and the lace industry ceased to exist for an entire century. In 1870 the Princess Margherita, afterward queen of Italy, took measures to revive it, especially as a means of providing employment for Venetian women. At present there are several schools, subsidized by the government, in which the art is taught.

The pupils are women of all ages. Each sits on a low stool and holds a plump, square cushion in her lap. On this cushion is pinned a strip of paper marked with the pattern to be followed, and into this pattern the nimble-fingered worker sticks glass-headed pins about which she twists her threads.

From twenty to fifty shuttles depend from all sides of the cushion, and these are thrown across and back with the rapidity of a typist handling the keys of her machine.

The process is so simple that it looks like play, but the lace produced represents thousands of dollars. The simple laces grow rapidly under the dexterous fingers of the women, but the exquisite rose point and other similar sorts are evolved much more slowly.—Harper's Weekly.

AGED MAN'S DARING ACT

Veteran Saves Girl's Life on Fifth Avenue, New York, but Has Thigh Broken.

Heroism is as natural to some men as cowardice is to others. It is confined to no nationality and is affected by neither years, education nor social degree. The hero never hesitates. He sees his opportunity, obeys the impulse of what he believes to be his duty and cheerfully accepts the consequences. Such a man is James Graves, of 80 Hull street, Brooklyn, who has an enviable war record and who is more than seventy years of age.

Recently Mr. Graves was driving a horse along Fifth avenue, New York. At the intersection of Twenty-eighth street he saw a girl standing, paralyzed by fear, in the pathway of a horse running madly down Twenty-eighth street toward the avenue. Her death seemed certain and women and men on the sidewalks paled with horror. But Graves is the sort of hero who is always most self-possessed in the face of death. He grasped the situation instantly and whipped his own horse squarely between the runaway and the girl. The impact was terrific. Both horses went to the pavement and the brave old soldier was thrown half-way across the avenue. He was unconscious when picked up and the doctors found his thigh was broken.

But the girl was unhurt.

Letter for John Doe, "Himself."
A new kind in addressing envelopes has been noticed recently by some of the postoffice clerks. Instead of the word "personal" on these envelopes to indicate that the letter is intended only for the eye of the person addressed has been written "himself." In each case these letters had been sent from England. In some parts of Ireland the head of the household is always referred to by the members of the family as "himself," and the influence of that custom may have had its effect on the English writers, or possible the writers were Irishmen living in England.

Vindicated.

"Prisoner at the bar," said His Honor, "you are charged with having struck a man and then run away. You are a respectable looking man, and I am sorry to see you here."

"But I am not guilty of the charge, sir."

"Didn't you strike a man?"

"No, sir. I simply made a motion."

"Didn't you run away?"

"I did not. It was impossible."

"How impossible?"

"I belonged to a baseball club for a year, and then was bounced because I couldn't make a run. Never made one the whole season."

"You may go, prisoner. You are not the guilty wretch I thought you!"

Settling a Bore.

Two friends had settled down to their coffee, cigarette and game of chess in a tea shop when a third, discordant third, joined them. He was unwelcome, obviously so; but that did not prevent him "chipping in" every moment with advice to the players. They endured him in silence, till at last glint of a shilling beside the board caught his eye.

"Hallo!" he said. "I didn't expect to find you chaps playing for filthy lucre."

"Indeed," said one of the players. "But it isn't the filthy lucre we object to; it's the filthy looker-on."

Then the game proceeded in silence.

That French aviator who flew upside down took more liberties with the law of gravity than any other man who ever lived to tell the story.

Nowadays, the fatted calf is not only killed when the prodigal son returns, but father lets him use the best motor car the family possesses.

Scene in Act 4, "THE ROUND UP."

The attraction at the Valentine theatre, Toledo, commencing Sunday, November 23, will be a distinct novelty, Klaw & Erlanger's great play of Southwestern life in Arizona, "The Round-up." As the title and locale of the scene indicates, it is a Western play, but not in the sense in which this term is generally used. The story is said to be a powerful and rational one, true to human life, and presents none of the clap-trap, wild-and-woolly situations sometimes seen in plays laid in the locality selected by this author, and presenting characters of the type which tell the story.

In addition to the regular dramatic cast there will be a large auxiliary company of genuine Western cavalries, men, scouts, cowpunchers, Mexican vapueros and Arizona girls, and incidentally twenty Indians and twenty-six highly trained cowponies from the Arizona ranges.

The story is said to be interesting and to keep the audience keyed up to the keenest pitch of interest from start to finish.

Matinees will be on Sunday, Wednesday, a special performance Thanksgiving afternoon, and usual Saturday matinee.

NATURE MARKS MAN'S GRAVE

Sprout From Wooden Coffin, Buried Many Years Ago, Grows Into Large Poplar Tree.

It is seldom perhaps that nature erects a monument to a person's memory, yet in a small country cemetery a few miles east of Nashville, Brown county, Indiana, may be found an object bearing that distinction.

More than 75 years ago a man named Alcorn became a resident of Brown county, and for several years lived near Salt Creek, in the eastern part of the county.

While residing here Alcorn met with an accident which resulted in his death, and he was buried in the cemetery near his home.

The coffin was hewed out of a part of a poplar tree and made into two sections. A few years later a small sprout began to shoot from the crude coffin, and not long afterward a small poplar tree began to spread its branches over the grave.

Within a few years it had grown to large proportions, and during the long period since it first appeared above the ground the tiny poplar sprout had grown into a tree that measured several feet in circumference and towers above all others in the vicinity.

Its branches spread far out in all directions, and many perhaps who pass nearby are attracted by the towering poplar, though they may be unfamiliar with its history.

Misunderstood.

Two young women went to the matinee. They could not get seats together, but were told at the box office that each could have an end seat, center aisle, in adjoining rows, and most likely somebody who came alone and had a chair next to one of them would obligingly exchange seats.

Near the close of the first act one of the young women timidly whispered to a heavy, middle-aged man at her side, who had been sitting stiffly and looking straight ahead:

"Are you alone, sir?"

"The man buried one side of his face in his program and breathed:

"Sh! Wife.—Everybody's Magazine."

Had a Very Weighty Reason.

Blinks, proprietor of Blinks' Freaks, a sideshow appurtenance to a three-ring circus, while getting together his talent for the opening of the road season, received a telegram saying that Buttercup Tubbs, his 600-pound fat woman, had just died.

An hour or so later he met on the street an acquaintance whom he had not seen for months.

"Why, hello, Blinks," the acquaintance said. "Glad to see you—but what's the matter, you're not looking fit. Had trouble?"

"Yes," replied Blinks shortly, "I've just suffered a heavy loss."

Not Hurt Socially.

"I wouldn't associate with him. I understand he's served a term in prison."

"That's true, but it was for an offense involving a million dollars or more; nothing really disgraceful, you know."

Saw Ancient City Under Sea.

The Greek Ministry of Marine states that Lieutenant Bakopulos, while carrying out the observations entailed by the naval duties assigned to him, happened to notice on the sea bottom to the east of the Island of Lemnos, on the reefs marked on the British Admiralty charts under the name of the Pharos Bank, at a depth of from five to twenty-five meters, some ancient ruins which were perfectly visible and prove the existence of a town about three miles in circumference.

Orders have been issued by the ministry to carry out scientific researches on the spot.
