

try. Oftentimes the names have faded away into the unknown while the deeds wrought have been preserved from the nearly all devouring ravages of time. For posterity would it be could we associate the name with the deed.

There need be no fear that the noble deeds of our brave soldiers will ever be forgotten while there shall be countrymen to write their history, or memories to cherish them. To-day you generously dedicate, in enduring form, and I hope for centuries, that which shall preserve the names of one hundred and twenty, or more, heroes, sent from this township to beat back the waves of a merciless and wrongful revolution. You inscribe these names, that in after years other generations may read, and in reading remember, who it was that helped to purchase, at so much sacrifice, those great national blessings which I trust may grow brighter as time shall grow older. Many of those names appear here yet with us, but before many years they will have passed away, leaving their history in the hands of posterity. Some whose names appear here fell upon the field of battle and consecrated their lives heroically by the shedding of blood. Others no less bravely met death in hospitals or on the march. But whether alive and active, or dying amid the roar and smoke of battle, or languishing out brave lives on beds of sickness, or on their mother earth, we yet can say of all, they did their duty well, and millions of people will enshrine their memory in millions of loyal hearts.

Then, in the name of the living, we here to-day, standing as free men and women in that broader liberty in which our country has so recently been baptized, dedicate this monument to the memory of the living as well as of the dead. May it, so long as it may be looked upon, remind you of your duties to your country and those who, by their labors made it possible for us in a lasting peace to here dedicate it to-day.

Here, in the presence of the living and above the repose of the dead, let speaker and listener renew his allegiance to his country, and here vow that by no word or act of ours shall it ever be made possible for our land to be again drenched in blood or torn by internal strife. And taking with us to-day that memory which binds every battle field and patriot's grave all over this broad land of ours to our living hearts, let us go forth to the performance of all those duties which have been cast upon us and in the performance of which we and our country are blessed. And when, in future years, other generations shall come to look upon your work of to-day, and here read the names of these heroes, may they be enabled to believe that

"On fame's eternal camping ground
Your silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with sacred round
The bivouac of the dead."

The full returns of the Vermont election as given by the World give Converse 28,609 majority.

The Illinois "Staats Zeitung" says that Carl Schurz is a swindler, and that the reform party are "Peter Funks."

General Sherman says the Germans are the best drilled troops ever marched, and that Germany will wield a controlling influence in Europe.

The Governor has issued a proclamation for an election on the eighth of October to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Lehner of Fairfield county.

"Carrying coals to Newcastle" is now a fact. The steamship Great Eastern has been chartered to land a cable at St. Johns, New Brunswick, and take back a load of 20,000 tons of coal to England.

Fifty thousand soldiers assembled at Pittsburg on the 17th, and a motion was unanimously adopted to send greeting to Gen. Grant, with the assurance that they will give him their unanimous vote in November.

The State Fair accounts have not yet been finally made up, but it is quite certain the board have cleared expenses and have a small margin. The sales of tickets amount to 15, 752.50. The number of tickets were eighty-five greater than the number sold last year.

Since March, the following States have given Republican majorities: New Hampshire, Connecticut, Oregon, North Carolina, Vermont and Maine. West Virginia has elected a Governor opposed to the Greeley combination, but not a single State has yet been pronounced in favor of the coalition.

The confederates in Maryland have secured an order from the State government to remove the battle flags deposited in the State Capitol at Annapolis after the rebellion, by the Union soldiers of that State. The reason is that the reminiscences brought up by their sight are very unpleasant. Battle-scared Union flags are a great nuisance to Greeley and his followers just now.

The "old-time Abolitionists of the West-ern Reserve" will take notice that Mr. Greeley confined his sympathies, in his Cleveland speech, to white rebels. He demanded that Jefferson Davis have the right to re-enter the United States Senate, but he had not a word in behalf of the colored man harried and maltreated by the Ku-Klux adancers of Jefferson Davis.

The New York Herald is of the opinion that Grant will even get the Southern States. It says concerning the black vote: "We may fairly conclude that the administration will also secure the Southern States in which the colored voters predominate, or form a large percentage of the population, such as South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Virginia, thus leaving the battle to be fought mainly in the Middle and Western States." Which makes it the more important for Republicans of the Middle and Western States, especially in October, to do their best.

GREELY said at Indianapolis the other day, that the two watchwords of the present campaign were "reconciliation" and "purity." This is, then, his stock in trade—cuddling kindness to his enemies, and the loss of the government, and bad faith and perfidy towards his life-long friends, and those whose steadfast patriotism have sustained both him and the government. The fellows with whom Greeley proposes a reconciliation, do not ask for a reconciliation except upon their own terms. Unless they can dictate terms, they care no more about him or his watchwords, than does the fellow who pulled the Philosopher's nose upon the steps of the Capitol some years ago. They, like the author of the watchword, are willing to use it, if it is to be the means of putting them into power. These claps, too, are the fellows whose exemplification of purity is such that we are to go to them as examples. The inhumanity and infamy with which many of them are covered, is no bar in Mr. Greeley's mind to their adoption by him into bedfellowship. He must bear with us if we are a little odorous, and hold out upon exemplars of a different character, and teachers somewhat more discriminating than our Philosopher friend. Indeed, our former great respect for the honesty of the Tribune and its editor, is so sudden and wonderful a change, is a little shaken, and it is not a little difficult to clear the mind of the suspicion that he is not wholly disinterested, after all. We are lead to doubt appearances, and the conclusion is well nigh inevitable that there is something of either the knave or the fool about the man. This proffered hand-shaking-reconciliation under dark and bloody chasms, is not a reliable entertainment, and our preference is to stand back—stand by those who present no such disabilities and objections. Those whose friends and efforts for the country show no such inconsistencies, and whose record is that of true men—loyal and defenders of the country. The two watchwords, therefore, that Mr. Greeley has put into the mouths of his followers, are, but the merest catch-words, put forth to deceive, and worthy in their application the man and the cause which have adopted them.

One of the principal watchwords of Horace Greeley while swinging around the circle, was purification. He proposes to purify the government if the people will only elect him President. People would have more confidence in his sincerity if he were not so prone to associate himself with the impure and corrupt men of both parties, and so notoriously profane himself. They do not forget that Fenton and Cochrane, and men of like character, are his chief advisers; that Tammany, with all its monstrous and abominable corruption, is his main dependence; that his nomination at Cincinnati was accomplished by his most disgusting trickery, and that if elected, his advisers and subordinates must come from the same class of people who foisted him upon the Cincinnati convention, or from ex-Confederate soldiers. What purification could be expected from such a source?

If the managers of Horace could cork him up as effectually on all subjects as they do on the subject of Protective Tariff, they might save thousands of votes. For many years Greeley could not open his mouth to speak but something would come out in favor of a tariff. Now he finds time to swing around the circle just before the elections in Vermont and Maine, and then in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana; to abuse soldiers and sailors; to repeat the oft-exploded falsehoods about disfranchisement of the South; and to advocate secession, and Credit Mobilier; to advocate secession, and immediate resumption of specie payments, and then take it all back and humbly beg for votes; but not a word—not a flap in favor of protection to American industry. If he ever had an honest conviction on any subject to which he adhered overnight, it was on this subject of tariff. Why can't his keepers shut off his disgusting twaddle on other subjects as well as on this.

GREELY, in his speech at Cleveland, claimed that the Democratic party had been converted from its former errors, that it had "abandoned all hostility to equal rights for men of every color." Some people have a curiosity to know when that conversion took place. Was it at the time of Greeley's nomination at Cincinnati, or was it when he was nominated at Baltimore? It must have been a case of almost instantaneous conversion at all events. The next query that comes up is, how much more quickly will the party go back to its former condition after getting into power?

GREELY has swung around the circle about after the fashion of Andy Johnson, showing the same childish garrulity, exhibiting much the same spite and venom, with much more falsehood and much less incertainty. His abuse of the soldiers and sailors was quite like Johnson's abuse of Congress, and will react upon him just about as favorably. His senseless falsehood, however, was in regard to the disfranchisement of southern rebels. Every school boy knows that there are none disfranchised at present, but Greeley says that in Arkansas alone 5,000 are still disfranchised. Governor Jewel of Connecticut, says of that assertion: "When he made that statement, which was false, he said that which he knew was false, which his hearers knew was false, and which he knew his hearers knew he knew was false."

Greeley, says the Cleveland Herald, vainly attempted to take back his Pittsburg secession declaration, but he has made no pretence of withdrawing his Pittsburg slander of the veteran defenders of the Union. On the contrary he indulged in another fling in his Newport speech when he asked, "Why should we call together multitudes of soldiers existing over the victories of the last struggle, and then rake up all the evil it has done in that struggle as though they were characteristic of the people?" Greeley's present masters vented their spite against the soldiers at every opportunity, and Greeley takes to their ways naturally. The veterans will remember this.

Queen Victoria is about to, for the second time, step over the bounds of English royalty, and give her only remaining daughter, Princess Beatrice, in marriage to the Marquis of Stafford. Beatrice wants to become a wife, and as there are no princes handy who are desirous of taking her for better or for worse, it has been deemed advisable to let her marry just whom she pleases. One of two things is patent to the English people—either Victoria was too proud in daughters, or the neighboring kings and queens too barren of sons, and hence they don't seem to care so much about this last violation of the Medes-and-Persian rule, which has obtained so long in the royal family.

GREELY and most of his fuglemen are now riding the hobby of reconciliation. They complain bitterly because a few perfidious rebels are not permitted to take seats in Congress and luxuriate in other places of profit and honor, as in former days, but they have nothing to say of the thousands of Union men who have been scourged and murdered by Ku-Klux, merely because they were Republicans. This pernicious candidate and his followers do not inform their hearers that more and better men than this whole batch of perfidious rebels have been killed in a single month by Greeley's followers at the south.

EXCITEMENT AMONG THE OIL PRODUCERS is showing itself in large meetings, the passage of resolutions, and a general determination to shut down on the production. One of these large and significant meetings was held at Oil City on Monday morning last. The object is to prevent the opening of new wells, and the increase of supply. About 400 wells, including all but twenty in the Tidmore and Fragnauds district, have been shut down for thirty days. The Chairman stated at this meeting, that the oil regions were eight millions in debt and are sinking over half a million a month. If such a course goes on, we will all be bankrupts.

The following resolution was fully and earnestly discussed and unanimously passed—Resolved, That in the sense of the producers of Oil, Gas, and surrounding interests, here assembled, it will be to the interests of this region that all pumping and drilling be suspended from the Monday evening, at six o'clock, to November first, and that we recommend that no more wells be commenced before the first of March next, and that we will do all in our power to carry out this resolution.

Other meetings were also held and a similar spirit manifested. Committees were also appointed to visit the different sections and take the pledges of the producers to fidelity in carrying out the objects of the movement and the organization springing therefrom. In consequence of this movement, the oil market is a shakier firm. Small sales of Oil City on the spot, were made at $3.00 to 3.05. Lower Creek nominal at $2.85 to 2.90.

SAN JUAN ISLANDS.—A copy of the Puget Sound Dispatch, published at Seattle, Washington Territory, under date of the 29th ult., we find the following correspondence, which, as it makes allusion to our young townsman, Lieutenant HUBBARD, his location and occupation, we think it will not be without interest to our readers.

San Juan Island being a place of some note between the United States and Great Britain, it may be of some interest to your readers to hear of something concerning it. To those now living on the island it will make no material difference which nation claims it, but having been there a few days since, I may add that should it be given to the British, many Americans will not remain long on the island. For several months past, the island of the best sections of country on this coast. Several settlers have made their pile in wood and sheep raising about. The soil is good for all farming purposes, and the climate is more healthy than on many of the neighboring islands.

It is understood that all the troops now stationed there will be removed in October, if not before. The American garrison is under the command of Lt. E. B. Hubbard, of the 2d U. S. Artillery, and includes several companies of infantry, together with a battery of artillery. The island has been a long time under the command of the confidence and respect of all the citizens of the island. Although he is invaluable with almost unlimited power, yet he uses it with such even-handed justice as does honor to his country in the estimation of every Englishman upon the island.

Dr. G. C. Douglas, the Post Surgeon, but the most estimable gentleman, and although not a few weeks there, he has made an excellent social acquaintance with his profession and made a name for himself in the island.

The crops on the island are over an average—notwithstanding the late dry season. There are at present about one hundred families on the island, and as a class they are about as happy as people can be found anywhere. They pay no taxes, nor duties on any goods for their own use, and sell what they raise at the highest market prices.

As the steamer is coming, it is well not to give what I star in it to be, a general description of the island, but will do so some other time.

Ex-Senator John P. Hale has written a long, forcible, and in every respect very able letter to Mr. J. P. Hale Jenkins of Norristown, Pa., in which he endorses Grant to the fullest extent, and shows the vacillation and treachery of Greeley from the beginning. He quotes from Greeley's History of the American Conflict, pages 358 and 359, first volume, to show that Greeley was a secessionist before secession was attempted, and pledged the influence of the New York Tribune to prevent coercion. He attributes the course of Sumner to egotism and off-encend vanity.

Notice our immense sale of Hill's 4-4 Bleach Cotton at 15 cents, same as sold elsewhere at 25 cents per yard. Since our advertisement last week we sold over 750 yds. Ask for it at—Hill's—People's Store.

A Woman's Opinion of Greeley.
Mrs. Paulina W. Davis now in Paris writes for the Providence Journal thus: "When I first heard of H. Greeley's nomination in Cincinnati, I regarded it as a joke, a burlesque, too ridiculous to be meant as serious, but the Baltimore Convention put another face upon the matter."

A man who is proverbially the dupe of knaves and swindlers, whose abundant vanity lives on the sweet cooing of his flatterers, whose ready utterance without consideration has often brought our country into trouble, should never hold the highest office in the gift of the people. I can not forget his cry of "On to Richmond," and then the weak, fathering course afterwards. I cannot forget that when it cost reputation he was cowardly on the slavery question, and it is not so long ago when the Times was staking its life upon the exposure of the Tammany ring, that we do not all remember how quiet the Tribune was.

I have always regarded him as a trimmer, and I see only in prospective, if he is elected, the weakest and most vacillating administration we have ever had. I have no faith in his judgment; his wayward impulses may be good, they sometimes are, but I should prefer a cooler head and warmer heart, if such is to be found among men.

Do not misunderstand me. President Grant is by no means my idea. He permits abuses at the South, of which I am personally cognizant, that are a disgrace to civilization; but I do not believe that these are as great as they will be with a much weaker man at the helm. Should H. G. be elected I believe a new rebellion will be inaugurated, and with the wily artfulness of the old politicians and their garnered experience, it will be one much more difficult to manage than the past one.

KEEP STRAIGHT AHEAD.—Pay no attention to slanders or gossip mongers. Keep straight on in your course, and let their backbiting die the death of neglect. What is the use of lying awake nights brooding over the remark of some false friend that runs through your brain like forked lightning? What is the use of getting into a worry and fret over a prospect that has been set adrift to your disadvantage by some meddlesome busy-body who has more time than character. These things cannot possibly injure you unless indeed, you take notice of them and in combating give them character and standing. If what is said about you is true, set yourself right at once; if false, let it go for what it will fetch, and live and destroy it? It is best to say little respecting the injuries you have received. We are generally the losers in the end if we stop to retaliate all back biting and gossipings we may hear. They are annoying, it is true, but not dangerous so long as we do not expostulate and scold. Our characters are formed and sustained by ourselves, and by our own actions and purposes, and not by calumnies. Let us bear in mind that calumnies may usually be trusted to time and the slow but steady justice of public opinion."

This, from the Danbury News, is worth a smile or two: "Two Squabble Hill men have been devoting themselves to one girl. Between the two she hardly knew who to choose, and fortune grew dizzy skipping from one banner to the other. Friday night, 1872, I appeared in a brand-new pair of pants that had the most gorgeous plaid ever worn by the young lady caved at once, threw herself upon his breast, and faintly articulated: "Oh, ain't they bully?" This of course solved the difficulty as to the maiden's choice, and there was evidently nothing more to do than to fix 'the day.' But alas! for human calculation. Sunday night No. 2 appeared on the scene with a shirt that opened behind. They are retired to the solitude of a tank-bark mill in York State."

PHILOSPHER GREELY has been swinging around the circle out west on a sort of starting expedition, and crowds of the faithful and curious came out to meet him wherever he made a halt. He passed through this place on Wednesday morning last, in a Palace car provided for him, and though quite a number assembled at the station to see him, and were gratified, the meeting was painfully and unprofitably short. He did not fully grace and proper—"no dog barked or ass brayed."

Arrived from Amherstburgh, Dominion, on the 24th ult., saw Perry White, W. L. Baker, Capt., with 40,000 feet Elm Lumber, consigned to E. R. Williams, and a package of whiskey—no unmaned parties.

Cleared, on the 26th inst. for Buffalo, saw Perry White, Capt. BAKER, with 65,000 feet of lumber, shipped by H. Hubbard & Co., consigned to Taylor & Crute, Buffalo.
