

Remodeling Old Frocks in Accord With Fashion's Ruling

The styles of twenty years ago seem to hold a strong place in the minds of the people this year, the one-piece frock and the separate, so-called "top-coat" being particular off-springs of the clothes of that day.

A practical innovation in this mode of dressing, which has taken the place of the suit in many cases. The dress may be dressy enough to wear to many things where a suit would be out of place and the top-coat, if taken with careful selection, may be worn for evening as well as day-time.

An Old Frock Is This Smart Gown

The coat of the season is cut in a variety of ways, each of which has some particular style feature to make it practical or smart. One is cut much like the last winter's raglan coat, merely belted a little closer to the figure so that the curve of the waist may be more in evidence. Or this same coat may have a tiny yoke with a collar and the full godet ripples pressed into pleats, which open out at every movement of the figure.

Another type of coat is that which is semi-tight fitting at the shoulders and flares widely at the bottom, in the shape of a Cossack coat. Another is distinctly of the Russian peasant style, buttoning at the side and belted with a wide belt. Around the bottom of the skirt portion is a wide band of fur, also at wrists and around the neck. The heavy richness of this trimming is most effective.

Another coat is cut with the upper portion like a sacque, having straight lines under the arms and drooping down considerably in the back. A flaring tunic is attached to this lower edge, cut in a circular piece so that it stands away from the figure almost, as though it were either heavily corded or wired. Rows of soutache trim the front and around the hips and the hem. Large buttons are used down the front. The skirt is very plain and rather narrow.

The kimono sleeve has had its day and most of the sleeves of coats are set into a regulation armhole, which is often outlined with a cording or piping.

The frocks which are made with kimono sleeves are easily brought up to the test rulings by putting velvet sleeves in a cloth bodice, black lace sleeves into a faille or velvet frock.

Taffeta sleeves are used in a serge gown.

In the illustration is a gown worthy of note. Hush, let me whisper in your ear, it is a made-over gown! In the stripes you see what was one gown and the black another. The combination is one which is often sought in new fabrics and particularly helpful when remodeling.

In the second gown is an extremely pretty one-piece model. Sand-colored broadcloth is used. The circular tunic is attached to a rather wide belt and tunic is a cord which loops over small crochet buttons for the fastening.

An absolutely plain waist of linen or white batiste, with possibly a few tucks front and back and long plain sleeves, which have turn-over cuffs, is worn a great deal this winter. The collar is usually high in the back and flaring in the front with a cravate of black.

Another waist for much more dressy hours is made of white satin with sleeves which have the top extended to a strip which reaches the edge of the collar. The collar of this waist is trimmed with an ostrich feather.

There is a Chinese satin which is just coming to the front, which may be washed without spoiling the luster. This fabric is being used for simple shirt waists and one smart young woman, who is noted for the good style of whatever she wears, has ordered a half dozen of this material to be made juts like men's negligee shirts.

A Frock of Sand Colored Broadcloth with Simple Trimming of Braid, Binding and Small Buttons

The middie blouse is having a vogue of its own, since that is really what many of the popular jumpers really are. It is another excellent way of renovating a frock. For instance, a skirt of broadcloth or serge seems very new, indeed, with the addition of a velvet waist, which hangs in a straight line from shoulder to hips.

The hats are in two extremes, the large and the small—there seems to be no "in between" hat. The high turban and the large sailor vie with each other for popularity and each seems to have variety enough in styles to make itself becoming to a variety of types of beauty.

The smartest thing in veils is one which is cut circular and hangs below the chin. This is worn with a small close-fitting hat.

PUBLIC SALE

Preparatory to assuming the office of Sheriff of Medina County, will sell at public sale at the Fair Grounds in Medina, Wednesday, Dec. 9, at 11 a. m., eastern time, the following live stock:

22 head high grade dual purpose Durham cattle, consisting of 12 extra good young cows, with calves by side; 2 fresh Jerseys and 10 head of young cattle, consisting of 3 head of good yearling steers, and 7 head of open yearling heifers. These cattle will make good beef, feeders or breeders. I think you will say that this is as fine a herd of Durham cattle ever offered for sale in Medina county, 250 head of Delain ewes, bred to Shropshire rams, and to begin lambing on March 25. These ewes are an extra good lot; young, sound and in good condition, and will be sold in small bunches to suit buyers.

Sale will take place rain or shine. Terms—Credit of six months with 6 per cent. interest, 2 per cent. discount for cash. Bankable notes required.

OBERLIN BUSINESS COLLEGE

HOLDS GREAT RECEPTION

The teachers and officers of the Oberlin Business College gave a reception to their students Wednesday evening of last week which proved the greatest social event of the year. Fully one hundred and fifty former students were present from Cleveland, Elyria, Lorain, Springfield, Wellington, Ashland, Toledo and other cities and towns all over Ohio and other places as far as Pittsburg. Caterer Hobbs had charge of the refreshments and with music, toasts and readings, the evening will long be remembered by all present.

Former students were delighted with the beautiful rooms of the new building, which gives this school an equipment not equaled by any other business college in Ohio. The Oberlin Business College has become noted for the interest which it takes in its present and former students.
