MANHOOD.

Look thou upon the outward life,
The active, restless, bustling life,
The one tempestuous, ceaseless strife
From which the world is never free!
Look thou into the heart of man
When tossed and torn by wild desire—
The toil to do what manhood can,
The aspirations pointing higher!

Think thou upon his weary days,
His anxious, watchful nights of gloom,
And see the wreath of withering days
That crowns at last an early tomb.
Then, if a single generous tear
Is wept for him in grief sublime,
And thou dost deem it very dear—
This need of glory paid by time,

Still, still think not that thou hast known
The all in all this life should be!
To toil, to mourn, to die, alone
Make not a man's divinity.
Poor are the honors of the earth,
And poorer yet its paltry praise;
And not for this does honest worth
Toil out its few but glorious days.

Is empty praise of brazen clow
Offering for the man whose soul
Lived all ignoble passions down
And went to God unstained and whole?
No—Heaven forbid! his glance discerns,
Dim through the future's cloudy day,
A higher, purer light than burns,
Surmounting and encircling all.

There is a nobler life within,
A life of soul, to which, if true,
He tramples out the sparks of sin,
He seeks his God, and meets Him too.
Then hush the throbs of the poor clay,
Fit but to moulder 'neath the sod,
Live firmly, nobly, gloriously,
True to yourself, and true to God!

A Good Day's Work.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

"I've done one good day's work, if I never do another," said Mr. Barlow, rubbing his hands together, wisely, and with the air of a man who felt very much pleased with himself.
"And so have I," Mrs. Barlow's voice was in a lower tone, and less exulting, yet indicative of a spirit at peace with itself.
"Let us compare notes," said Mr. Barlow, in the confident manner of one who knows that triumph will be on his side, "and see which has done the best day's work."
"You of course," returned the gentle hearted wife.
"We shall see. Let the history of your day's doings precede mine."
"No," said Mrs. Barlow, "you shall give the first experience.
"Very well," and full of his subject, Mr. Barlow began:
"You remember the debt of Warfield about which I spoke a few days ago?"
"Yes."
"I considered it desperate—would have sold out my entire interest at thirty cents the dollar when I left home this morning. Now the whole claim is secured. I had to scheme a little. It was a sharp practice, but the thing is done. I don't believe that another creditor of Warfield's will get one-third of his claim."
"The next operation," continued Mr. Barlow, "I considered quite as good.—About a year ago I took fifty acres of land in Erie county, for a debt, at a valuation of five dollars per acre. I sold it to-day for ten. I don't think the man knew just what he was buying. He called to see me about it, and I asked ten dollars an acre at a venture, when he promptly laid down one hundred dollars to bind the bargain. If I should never see him again, I am all right. That is transaction number two. Number three is as pleasant to remember. I sold a lot of goods, almost a year out of date, to a young country merchant, for cash. He thinks he has a bargain; and perhaps he has; but I would have let them go at any time during the past six months, at a loss of thirty per cent, and thought the sale a desirable one."
"Now there's my good day's work, Jenny, and it is one to be proud of. I take some credit to myself for being, upon the whole, a pretty bright sort of a man, and bound to go through. Let us have your story now."

The face of Mrs. Barlow flushed slightly. Her husband waited for a few moments and then said:
"Let us hear of the yards of stitching, and the pile of good things made."
"No—nothing of that," answered Mrs. Barlow, with a slight veil of feeling covering her pleasant voice, "I had another meaning when I spoke of having accomplished a good day's work. And now as my doings will bear no comparison with yours, I think of declining their rehearsal."
"A bargain is a bargain, Jenny," said Mr. Barlow. "Word-keeping is a cardinal virtue. So let your story be told.—You have done a good day's work in your own estimation, for you said so. Go on, I am all attention."
Mrs. Barlow still hesitated. But after a little more urging, she began her story of a good day's work. Her voice was a little subdued, and there was an evident shrinking from the subject about which she felt constrained to speak.
"I resolved last night," said she, "after passing some hours of self-examination and self-upbraidings, that I would for one day try to possess my soul in patience.—And this day has been the trial day.—Shall I go on?"

Mrs. Barlow looked up with a timid, half bashful air at her husband. She did not meet his eyes, for he had turned partly away.
"Yes, dear Jenny, go on." The husband's buoyancy of tone was gone. In its place was something tender and pensive.
"Little Eddy was unusually fretful this morning as you will remember. He seemed perverse, I thought—cross, as we call it. I was tempted to speak harshly two or three times; but remembering my good resolutions, I put on the armor of patience, and never let him hear a tone.—Dear, little fellow! When I went to wash him after breakfast, I found just behind one of his ears a small inflamed boil. It has made him slightly feverish and worrying some all day. Oh, wasn't I glad that patience had ruled my spirit?"

After you went away to the store, Mary got into one of her cross, perverse humors. She didn't want to go to school to begin with; then she couldn't find her slate, and then her shoe pinched her. I felt very much annoyed; but, recalling my good resolution, I met her irritation with calmness, her willfulness with patient admonition, her stubborn temper with gentle rebuke; and so I conquered. She kissed me and started for school with a cheerful countenance, her slate in her satchel and the pinching shoe unheeded. And so I had my reward.

But my trials were not over. Some extra washing was needed. So I called Ellen and told her that Mary would require a frock and two pair of drawers to be washed out, and the baby some slaps, and you some pocket-handkerchiefs. A saucy refusal leaped from the girl's quick tongue, and indignation welled to mine. Patiently I listened, and she said, "I will wash your frock and two pair of drawers, and I will wash your slaps, and I will wash your handkerchiefs, and I will wash your head, and I will wash your feet, and I will wash your face, and I will wash your hands, and I will wash your shoes, and I will wash your stockings, and I will wash your drawers, and I will wash your pants, and I will wash your
