The Trial of Jefferson Davis.

The trial of Jefferson Davis still continues to be an exciting topic of discussion in the public journals and among the people. Under the provisions of the Constitution, or of international law, the duty and course of the Administration would be clearly understood, but the doubt in the public mind arises from a want of confidence that the Administration will be guided by any law. We have already seen a woman and three or four men denied a constitutional trial by jury, and hung, upon the finding of an illegal military commission, to appease howling fanatics—and we know not but that a similar "outside pressure" may again induce the President to act the part of an usurper and a tyrant.

As a prisoner of war, Mr. Davis is only amenable to international law, which would not hold him responsible for the acts of the rebel army, or Southern people, as a prisoner of State, he is entitled to the benefit of the provisions of the Constitution, which secure to him a trial by jury—but the absurdity of any arraignment of Mr. Davis, is rendered palpable by the fact that it would virtually be an indictment of the whole people of the South, as he acted solely as their representative. He can not be charged with any individual crime, except the general one of treason, in which he is no more guilty than the majority of his constituents.

The policy of the Government is evidently adverse to the further punishment of Mr. Davis, as the tranquility and harmony of the country can be better secured by his unconditional release, than by any vengeful course, calculated to embitter those whom it is our intrest to win back to a cheerful support of the Union. In fact, the fanatical friends of the Administration ought to be appeased by the military murder of Mrs. Surratt and poor old Wirz, and President Johnson ought now to hearken to the appeals of the sane people of the country, for the reinauguration of an "era of good feeling," by the promulgation of a general amnesty, and the discharge of all political prisoners.

Reconstruction.

The editor of the Freeman's Journal, in discussing the subject of reconstruction according to the idea of some of the New England politicians, makes a good point out of their argument in the following paragraph:

But, if the sentiment of the people has been so changed as to attribute to the Federal Government the power and the right to "reconstruct" States, let us turn our attention to the six New England States, and reconstruct them. Let us declare it a "political necessity," and, if they rebel, a "military necessity" to abolish the governments of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, and to "reconstruct," on their ruins a one State, or Province, of "New England." Let New England have just two representatives, and no more, in the United States Senate, and a Representation accordina to her numbers, in the lower house.

As an evidence of the progress of shoddy sentiment in Washington City towards barbarism, we need only state that the Chronicle, Forney's paper and the official organ of the kitchen cabinet, is out in a leader in favor of making the crime of counterfeiting government shinplasters punishable with death. Forney raves thus:

"The crime of counterfeiting the national currency justifies the punishment of death. The national credit is at stake. The perpetuity of the government is at stake. The life of the nation is paramonnt to all other considerations. Is treason the highest crime? then is this also, for it is the quintessence of treason, and works the same destructive results."

One would judge from such utterances that "loyalty" had demented the men about Washington, and that the Digger Indians should send a missionary there to reform the uncivilized slaves who earn their bread by bellowing for more work for the hangman. But it seems as if there was a furore in Washington in regard to the counterfeiting business, as the following dispatch was sent from that city:

"The Government detective force, so far from being disbanded, as was doubtless the intention of the President at one time, has a new, important and legitimate work laid out for it, in the chief cities of the Union, enk along the borders, to detect and apprehend counterfeiters of greenbacks, smugglers and defrauders of Internal Revenue. Blank pages in the detective journals are doubtless devoted to unofficial information in regard to Fenian movements, about which the authorities are merely anxious to satisfy their curiosity."

Whether there is any connection between the frenzied enthusiasm for hanging in the Chronicle and the retention of the detective thieves, alluded to here, we leave the reader to guess. The subject is only worthy of consideration as showing the hideous demoralization which pervades our republican court at Washington.—Columbus Crisis.

Ancient Cities.—The great cities of the present day are comparatively small affairs beside the cities of the past, if we except London, Paris and New York. Ninevah was fifteen miles long, nine wide, and forty miles round, with a wall one hundred feet high, and thick enough for three chariots abreast. Babylon was sixty miles within the walls, which were seventy-five feet thick, and three hundred feet high, with one hundred brazen gates. Carthage was twenty-five miles round, and contained two hundred and fifty thousand citizens and four hundred thousand slaves. The walls of Rome were thirteen miles round.

Two members of the Canadian Parliament, Messrs. Galt and Scot, have arrived in Washington, to be present at the opening of Congress.

It is understood that Adjutant General Thomas will soon retire from the army, to be succeeded by General Townshend.

THE BLACKBIRD.

A good many parodies have been written on "The Raven, by Edgar A. Poe," but nothing superior to this, which comes to us from an anonymous source:

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary,
O'er the war of the Rebellion, and the things that were before—
While I sat absorbed in thinking—brandy cocktails slowly drinking,
Suddenly I saw a blinking, one eyed figure at my door—
Saw a one eyed, winking, blinking figure at my door,
Standing there, and nothing more.

Ah! I ne er shall forget it, how in glancing round I met it,
And I ever shall regret it, that I looked toward that door;
For I saw a monstrous figure, like a giant, only bigger,
And there stood a big buck nigger, leaning up against my door—
Stood a powerful big buck nigger, with his back against my door—
Leaning there and nothing more.

Straight into the fire-place spying, where my ham and eggs were frying,
I beheld the poker, lying near the hearth upon the floor;
Then with most determined vigor, straight I hailed it at the nigger.
But so quick was that big nigger, that it missed and struck the door—
Missed the nigger's head completely, and fell harmless on the floor—
Struck his heel, and nothing more.

Back into the fire-place poking, where my ham and eggs were cooking,
Shaking, quaking—as no mortal ever shook or quaked before—
I then heard the ugly sinner mutter his these words—"Some dinner!"
'Twas the only word he'd spoken, 'twas the only word I'm sure—
When I picked up pluck and answered, "I shall feed you nevermore!"
This I said, and nothing more.

Then his impudence beginning and his gums exposed in grinning,
With a smile by no means winning, did he view me from the door,
And coolly said, "Your treat, man—I'll never go in the street, man,
Till I get some to eat, man, I'll never leave your door.
I'll never quit your chamber, though you beat me till I roar,
Never leave you—nevermore."

Then toward the fire place marching, where my coffee was a patching,
Boldly stalked the saucy nigger, boldly stalked across the floor;
Never made the slightest bow, sir—then I knew there'd be a row, sir,
For I made a solemn vow, sir, he should go back to th door;
Then I kicked him from my chamber and he went back to the door,
Leaned against it—nothing more.

Then this Blackbird, for a while, sir, really did cause me to smile, sir,
Though a ravenous, rabid, hungry look, his dusky visage bore;
"Though," said I, "Thou art a Freedman, thou hast gone so much to see, man,
That I'll give a little feed, man, as you seem to be so poor,
Provided you will work for me a half an hour or more."
Quoth the nigger, "Nevermore!"

Much I marvelled this ungainly nigger should refuse so plainly,
To do a little job, twould taken half an hour or more
For we cannot help agreeing that no living human being
Should refuse to labor, seeing that he was so blasted poor—
Should refuse to earn a dinner he saw cooking from my door—
Though he ate one "nevermore!"

There I sat engaged in musing, what he meant by thus refusing,
And I then began abusing this big nigger at my door
"Sure," said I "you must be crazy to be so cursed lazy—
To be so awful lazy as to want to work no more—
Will you ever work for wages—tell me, I implore?"
Quoth the nigger: "Nevermore!"

"Nigger," said I "horrid demon—nigger still, if slave or freedman—
Think again before you answer this one question, I implore;
Have you yet no sense of feeling—do you mean to live by stealing,
Or by working and fair dealing—tell me, tell me, I implore;
On your honor, as a nigger, will you labor as before?"
Quoth the nigger: "Nevermore!"

Startled at the stillness broken by reply so flatly spoken,
"Doubtless," said I, "this big nigger would eat enough for four,
When on some spacious rice plantation, he would eat out all creation—
Never made a calculation how much cash it cost, I'm sure,
For his master bought the victuals in the good old days of yore,
Now he'll feed you "Nevermore!"

"Nigger," said I, "thing of evil, quite my room, go to the devil—
Or if you say you'll work, I'll bring your supper to the door;
Tell me truly, I conjure you, for the last time, I implore;
On your honor, as a nigger, will you labor as before?"
Quoth the nigger: "Nevermore!"

"Be that word our sign of parting, nigger man!" I cried upstarting—
"Get thee back to where thou can'st from—let me see your face no more
Join the army—go to Texas—never come back here to vex us—
Never return again to vex us—never let us see you more;
Take your vats from off my meat, and take your carcass from my door!"
Quoth the nigger: "Nevermore!"

And the nigger still is standing in my entry on the landing,
A pretty burly picture, with his back against my door,
And his eyes are ever spying at my ham as it is frying,
And my poker still is lying near my hand upon the floor,
But my victuals to the "fly trap" of that nigger by my door,
Shall be lifted—"Nevermore!"

Several days ago resolutions were introduced into the Senate of Tennessee declaring Jefferson Davis, J. M. Mason, R. M. T. Hunter, Robert Toombs, Howell Cobb, Judah P. Benjamin, John Slidell and Robert E. Lee to be infamous traitors, worthy of death, and not fit objects of national clemency. Since then the resolutions have been taken up, debated, and amended by including the names of James Buchanan and John C. Breckinridge, and passed by a vote of yeas 15, nays 3. This same Legislature has on several occasions tabled resolutions approving the administration of President Johnson, and judging of the temper then displayed, it is a matter of surprise that his name was not included. Whatever may have been the weaknesses and criminality of Mr. Buchanan in dealing with the rebellion, one member of Mr. Lincoln's cabinet has furnished convining proof that they were indorsed by Messrs. Holt, Stanton, Seward and Lincoln. The Tennessee Legislature, to have been consistent, should therefore have included these names in its list. Its authority, however, will not weigh much. It is a thing of Brownlow's, who was in 1860 as rabid a secessionist as any one named, and as venomous a disunionist as Wendell Phillips, the present leader of the Republican party.—Chicago Times.

A Contemptible Act.—The London, (Ohio) Democrat, last week, has the following statement:

On Friday afternoon, as the Springfield train was passing the farm of John Cloak, a few miles from here, some one on the train shot and killed a valuable horse belonging to that gentleman. All efforts to obtain the name of the monster who fired the pistol have thus far been fruitless, but we hope that he may be found and punished as he justly deserves. A man who would thus wantonly destroy stock, does not deserve to be called human.

The Dayton Empire.

The first number of this stegling Democratic paper, since passing into the control of Mr. H. H. Robinson, formerly of the Cincinnati Enquirer, comes to us in a new dress with smiling face. Mr. R. is a gentleman of talent, and a writer of much ability; and together with his assistant, Mr. D. G. Fitch, the Empire will be made second to no journal in the State. It is a real live paper, full of interesting reading matter and sound political editorials. After the many trying vicissitudes through which the Empire has passed, it affords us pleasure to see it once more in the high tide of prosperity. Good fortune attend it.—Hamilton True Telegraph.

The Dayton Empire.—This old and reliable Democratic journal has been purchased by H. H. Robinson, Esq., formerly of the Cincinnati Enquirer, who, at an early day, will bring the Empire out in an entire new dress. Mr. R has the reputation of a first-class journalist, and we doubt not will make the Empire what it has been, under the control of brother Hubbard—one of the best Democratic papers in the west. Success to the outgoing as well as to the incoming editor.—Hancock Courier.

Honesty.—The Cincinnati Enquirer chronicles a remarkable case of honesty—that of a man who was seen on 34th street Market-space making inquiry for some person who had lost a roll of money. The roll consisted of $7,000 in greenbacks, and the finder was a poor express-driver, dependent upon his daily labor for a support. Will he be set down for an honest man or a fit subject for a lunatic asylum?

The New York delegation are inclined to press Henry J. Raymond, editor of the New York Times, for Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, in place of Thad. Stevens.

According to the New York Herald's Toronto correspondent, the Fenians have 82,000 men in Canada, half of whom are armed.

Up to four o'clock on the 30th only thirty-five members of Congress had reported themselves in Washington.

Trouble Ahead.

We may look out for squalls, when Congress meets. The Radicals, led by Sumner & Co., are determined to head friend Andy in his restoration policy, while the President, backed by those who are receiving their crumbs at his hands, will give Charley a free fight. It is an old saying that "when rogues fall out honest men get their dues." We hope it may prove true in this instance.

The Radicals will make a desperate effort to prevent the Southern members from taking their seats, but whether they can obtain a two-third vote or not remains to be seen. If not, the President will try what virtue there is in the veto power. We have no more confidence in the President "than the law allows," but hope there may be enough of "Old Hickory in him to veto the designing schemes of these New England fanatics.—Hamilton True Telegraph.

From Chicago.

Chicago, December 1.

Fleming, one of the murderers of Maloney, under sentence of death, and to be hung on the 15th inst., has, it is reported, sold his body to a surgeon of this city for dissection, for $50.

George Francis Train delivers a lecture to-morrow night in behalf of the Fenians. His subject is, "The Fenian Scare in Ireland; or the devil to pay among the Canucks."

Highway robberies, burglaries, shooting affrays, &c., are of very frequent occurrence in this city, and it is hardly safe for a citizen to return home after nightfall if he happens to reside in the suburbs. Scarcely a day passes that we do not hear of outrages of one kind or another, and so frequent have they become that there is some talk of forming a vigilance committee.

RHEUMATISM.

SPRING VALLEY, GREEN CO. OHIO, October 2, 1865.

MR. B. MISHLER.
Respected Sir: For the benefit of the afflicted, I wish to publicly make known that, I have been wonderfully afflicted with Rheumatism, so much so, that I was compelled to lay down, and there lay for weeks at a time, and when I did get up, had to go for weeks at a stretch on my crutches, suffering all the time the most excruciating pains that living mortal ever suffered. I am in the Drug and Grocery business at this place, and about four weeks ago my clerk was at Dayton, Ohio, and your agent W. W. Stewart, of that place, gave him a few of your papers and I read them, and, by your liberal offer to refund the money if a cure was not effected, I felt resolved to give it one fair trial, and immediately ordered two dozen, thinking I could use some and sell some, but I only got one dozen and it went right off. I then procured three dozen more, and it is selling very fast.

I wish here to state publicly, that I am now in better health than I have been for the last ten years. I suffer no pain—have a better appetite than for many years before. I am now 47 years of age, and I feel almost as well as I did at the age of 20. Hundreds can testify to my case. I have been in the Drug business in this place for ten years, and am known far and wide. I want my case published, in order that the world may know the best by virtue of your bitters. Furthermore, I wish to have the sole Agency of this county, wholesale and retail, provided you grant agencies of that kind. You will oblige me very much by sending me a circular of terms and prices; and if all is satisfactory, I will take an agency—not that I want to make a fortune at the business, but desire to be the means, as much as lays in my power, of relieving my fellow-man of the suffering that many have to endure.

Yours truly,
JAMES JONES.
