TWO BRITISH STEAMERS, 125 LIVES, TOLL OF GERMAN SUBMARINES

Without Waiting for Crew and Passengers to Leave Germans Sink Ship.

THIRTEEN ON AGUILA WENT DOWN WITH IT

One Hundred Ten Submerged With Fishermen; Travelers Go to the Resort.

THURSDAY, Tulsa, March 29 (10:50 a.m.)—Thirteen pinnies of the British steamship Aguilas, which was sunk by the German submarine U-2 on Saturday, lost their lives. The crewmen, who arrived here today say the Aguilas was sunk when the submarine was some miles before the port of the Sisselms, a group of rocks on the southwestern side of the North Channel. The crew was given four minutes in which to leave the ship, but the men said they were bombarded with explosive shells, and others were killed by the shell fired and the fumes of the oil were used.

The captain of the submarine landed another man in this city and told him of his sinking. The fate of the Aguilas is now an open question.
