THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 17, 1906.

President Douglas of the Twin Territory Press Association doesn't sound bad.

The Atchison Globe says: A country subscriber coming to this office advertised a cow for sale, as follows: "Fullblooded cow for sale, giving milk, three tons of hay, a lot of chickens and several stores."

Bliss J. Steffens (son) through Emporia the other day, and William Allen White, who met him at the depot, says: "He carries his famous milk-rake on three flat cars and they have to go slowly around the curves in the railroad. The teeth of the rake have scraped some of the roofs of the highest houses on the Santa Fe, and though the teeth are dulled from recent use, they still retain on their blunted points the hair and whiskers and fragmentary remains of a number of congressmen. It was a fierce-looking instrument as it lay on its flat cars, teeth upward, and menacing, and the crowd at the depot gathered round it to see if the remains of any of their friends might be found impaled upon it. Colonel X. Y. Morrison, our well-known and respected townsman, claims that he found some hair and a section of hide that formerly belonged to Speaker Cannon."

While we are making such a row about trusts, we should remember that the Standard Oil and the packers and the railroads do not have a monopoly of them. Grocery men, even small dealers, agree to a certain price on goods; wholesale dealers in every line of goods have established prices; builders charge exactly the same prices he let, the builders nearly always agree upon the man who is going to have the work; even milk peddlers charge exactly the same price for the same amount of milk. It is co-operation that rules the world today, and the laboring man has his trust in the union that defends him against other trusts. The labor trust is perhaps the most powerful on earth if it seeks fit to exert that power. The trouble with it is the lack of harmony among the managers. No lack of harmony exists among managers of the Standard Oil company, or the beef trust, or the railroads trust gets into action. But the combine of labor, if it should stand together, could crush every other combine into submission, for it is the most powerful of all. Without labor, capital is a creeping infant. The secret of the trusts is concert of action. The laboring men have not yet learned their power; when they do, they can break combines that the law is helpless to move.

Good roads are needed.

A movement worthy of the Commercial Club is being undertaken by that energetic body—the improvement of the public highways leading into the city of Tulsa. It is a step in the right direction and should receive the support of every citizen in the community.

The funds for this undertaking were raised by a popular subscription, and the names of the most of the business men are upon the roll of honor. A goodly sum was realized and will be expended wisely by the able men directing the affairs. Moreover, it is not throwing dollars away. Two dollars will be returned for every dollar invested.

When roads were in frightful condition this spring, the road drag had a great run, and some of the roads were out in fine condition. But as soon as the rains ceased, the King drag was put out of commission. We all laugh at the Arkansas traveler story of a man who didn't need a roof when it was pleasant and couldn't put it on when it rained, but are we any wiser or less shiftless than the Arkansas man?

Let us have good roads.

Now that the Carnegie library has been relegated to the rear, the World is waiting for the denators who were going to build a public library by private subscription or doing the same work when a large contract is to

A Little Way...

A little way to walk with you, my own—
 Only a little way.
 Then one of us must weep and walk alone,
 Until God's day.
 A little way. It is so sweet to live
 Together that I know
 Life would not have one withered rose to give
 If one of us should go.
 And if these lips should ever learn to smile,
 With thy heart far from mine,
 'Twould be for joy that in a little while
 They would be kissed by thine.
 —Frank L. Stanton.

The Worst Ever.

When the butterflies make butter,
 And see a horse-fly high;
 When the whip-snares whip and mutter,
 Then you see a horse-fly by.

If you ever see a cat-fish
 With a county-line and tadpole;
 And a catfish tea from a dish,
 Then you'll see a hell wavel bill.

Should an ant ever crawl up a tree
 and bark,
 And a balky horse fail to balk;
 Then you can go down the street in the dark,
 And see the other side walk.

Did you ever see a tree-shoot shoot;
 Or a grass blade cut a swath?
 Did you ever see a hoar-owl's hoot,
 Or a tank of laughing gas laugh?

Could you telephone in the street,
 Or roll a hoop-snake hoop?
 Could you find more than four feet
 In a lovers' nook?

PROCLAMATION.

The Fifteenth Annual Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will meet in Tulsa, Indian Territory, May 17 and 18, 1906.

In honor of the old soldiers, who will be with us on this occasion, we earnestly request that the American flag be displayed from all municipal buildings, places of business and private residences, and ask our citizens to join in making this event one long to be remembered by them. Let us, from one end of the city to the other, fling the stars and stripes to the breeze. May it greet the rising and salute the setting sun and float throughout this encampment from every church, edifice, school building, public and private place.
 JOHN O. MITCHELL,
 Mayor of the City of Tulsa,
 Indian Territory.

READY ON SUNDAY.

The Finishing Touches Are Being Put on the Methodist Church.
 The finishing touches are being put on the new Methodist Episcopal church, to get it in good readiness for Sunday. The light fixtures are being adjusted. When the last touch has been added and it will be opened Sunday morning to the public, it will certainly be a monument to the public spirit and enterprise of our bustling city—the city of the great southwest.

Proper System.

Ex-Governor Ferguson tells this one:

"Recently a young man at Shawnee asked Cash Cade if he would advise a youthful aspirant for political honors to study law as a stepping stone. It is said that Cade looked away toward the clouds of Red river and answered: "No! Not by a — sight! I would advise you, young fellow, to commence by catching wolves."

HISTORIC COLLECTION.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Will Buy Costly Bunch of Laces.

Paris, May 16.—A Paris dealer in antiquities hopes to bring about the transfer of the superb collection of laces in the Vatican to Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt. The dealer, a most reputable man, says the Pope has recently been asked the value of "all the frippery," as His Holiness calls it.

The laces were the gifts of royal brides to succeeding popes. Since the time of the Borgias, it has been the custom for Roman Catholic queens and princesses to offer their wedding robes to the church. So that the laces have been accumulating in the Vatican for centuries.

If the dealer can interest the Vanderbilts and persuade the Pope, who doubts if he has the right to sell them, America will possess the greatest collection of historical laces in the world and worth easily $500,000. Mrs. Vanderbilt's collection would be more valuable than Queen Alexandra's which is worth $400,000, or Empress Eugenia's, which she will bequeath to her god-daughter, Princess Ena of Battemberg, who is about to become the queen of Spain.

Mr. Vanderbilt, whose horses won two races in one day this week, is interesting himself in behalf of an unlucky American bookmaker, the brother of the Vanderbilt trainer, Duke. The law confines all betting to the Paris Mutuels, which brings a sure revenue, a percentage of the bets to the city and state. Duke made a book and the police arrested him. He will escape serious consequences probably for Mr. Vanderbilt is using his personal influence for him.
