Mrs. Walls Makes Public Some Interesting Facts Which Should Interest All Women.

Lehnarts, Tenn.—Mrs. Martha Walls, of this town, makes the following statements for publication: "I feel it my duty to tell you what your medicine, Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done for me.

For four (4) years I suffered terribly with womanly troubles, and I found no relief in different medicines which I took. Finally, I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and after taking six bottles I am completely cured. I feel like a different person altogether. All the pains are gone, and I am in better health than I have been in for four years. Have gained a great deal in weight.

I still take Cardui as a tonic. My husband, as well as myself, cannot praise it too highly.

I hope this letter will induce other poor, suffering women to try Cardui, for it is the best medicine in the world for women."

If you suffer from any of the numerous ailments so common to all women, why not take this lady's advice, and try Cardui? It has helped her, as well as a million other women in the past half century. Why shouldn't it do the same for you? We feel sure it will.

MELISSA RECOGNIZES INSUPERABLE BARRIER.

Mrs. Merriwid's maternal maiden Aunt Jane wore her real rose coral necklace, a pink waist and a mysterious smile, the latter adornment being assumed when Mrs. Merriwid expressed her admiration of the general effect.

"The rate at which you're improving makes my head swim," declared Mrs. Merriwid. "You'll be tottering around in a hobble the next thing I know."

"Mr. Chubb will be here this afternoon, Melissa," observed Aunt Jane in a casual manner, as she shifted her embroidery hoops.

Mrs. Merriwid opened her eyes wide and became staringly rigid. "Here—this—afternoon?" she exclaimed. "Why, I told him distinctly that I was going to the matinee. I told you that I had reasons for staying at home, Jessie. Surely you remember. When did he tell you he was coming?"

Aunt Jane's face approximated the color of the coral necklace. "He telephoned about an hour ago," she replied. "I didn't want to disturb you about it so I said you would be very glad to see him. I thought you liked him, Melissa."

"I'm crazy about him," said Mrs. Merriwid, dryly. "I think he's the sweetest thing that ever brushed three strands of hair across a bald spot. Still, I'm afraid he'll be disappointed if he expects to see me this

Mrs. Merriwid. "I wouldn't say anything to embarrass you for worlds, intentionally. But you know, Auntie, that nobody loves a fat man."

"Stout people have their feelings," said Aunt Jane.

"Still, I'm afraid that I can never learn to love him," Mrs. Merriwid persisted. "It isn't only that I ache to push him over with my finger to see if he won't roll right side up again; it's not merely the fact that he wears those double thick convex spectacles that give him a somewhat pop-eyed effect of looking into my strictly private soul, and I could overlook his regular habits and his side whiskers; poor dear Henry Merriwid had both side whiskers and regular habits. What keeps me from hiding my blushing face in his shirt bosom and murmuring a bashful consent is his delusion that he has a rather nifty tenor voice."

Aunt Jane looked at her niece queerly. "There's something else, isn't there, my dear?" she asked.

"I haven't given the matter a great deal of thought," replied Mrs. Merriwid serenely. "There might be, of course."

"It occurs to me, my love, that his not asking you might be a consideration," suggested Aunt Jane, in a shaky voice. "You might find the further fact that he has no idea of asking you something in the nature of an insuperable bar. You see, Melissa, dear, it is highly probable that you have misconstrued the purpose of Mr. Chubb's afternoon. Me for the impenetrable recesses of the tangled woods. I'll let you console him for my absence, dearie, and you can blame yourself."

Aunt Jane's eyes lost their usually mild expression and she jabbed her needle into her work with some viciousness. "Thank you, my dear," she said. "At the same time I don't regard the society of a well-informed and gentlemanly man as an infliction, however you may feel about it, and I may add, my love, that it seems to me unladylike to make personal remarks. Even if Mr. Chubb were bald—which he is not—it would be no reflection on him."

"I didn't say it was shiny enough to reflect," said Mrs. Merriwid.

"And intellectual men nearly always have a tendency to baldness," pursued Aunt Jane.

"They're generally smooth people—on top," admitted Mrs. Merriwid.

"You talk nonsense," snapped Aunt Jane. "If being bald is a crime it's strange that they have to keep barbers in prisons to cut the convicts' hair. You ought to get a Skye terrier if you're so fond of things that look like door-mats. I suppose that's what you find so attractive in Mr. Victor."

"I wonder if that is it," said Mrs. Merriwid, dreamily, "or whether it's because Mr. Victor hasn't dimpled knees? Honest, Auntie, dear, don't you think dimpled knees on a male person over seven have a tendency to destroy the spirit of romance?"

"Melissa," said Aunt Jane with spirit, "if you talk like that I shall leave the room."

"Please excuse me, dearie," begged rather frequent visits here, and that, however attractive you may be to some gentlemen, there are other gentlemen who—who—who-oo-oo."

Aunt Jane snatched the little lace handkerchief from her belt, pressed it to her eyes and started for the door, her shoulders shaking with emotion, but before her hand could touch the knob her niece had her in an embrace from which there was no escape.

"Auntie!" cried Mrs. Merriwid. "Look at me! You don't mean to tell me that—Oh, you dear thing! Auntie, if I had had the faintest idea in the world that—you know I didn't mean anything by what I said, and I think he's a darling and as sweet and lovable as he can be. Dearie, please! Here, I'm going to shake you. Tell me, has he actually proposed?"

Aunt Jane giggled a little hysterically. "He—he has intimated—that he will this afternoon," she stammered.

"Heaven forgive you, you've broken my heart!" Mrs. Merriwid laughed delightedly. "You perfidious things! Here I've been thinking all along that I had a chance, and now—Oh, Auntie, Auntie! Now you can run along and bathe your eyes and pretty up and I'll be out of the house inside of ten minutes."

"You—you're sure you don't mind, Melissa?" said Aunt Jane, anxiously.

Mrs. Merriwid kissed her fervently and reassuringly and then, taking her by the shoulders, turned her out of the room and apostrophized the electro-roller.

"Well, wouldn't that agitate you?" she said.

PLAN FOR MEMORABLE DAY

Anti-Tuberculosis Society Has Set Apart Sunday, Dec. 7, for a Special Purpose.

Last year over 60,000 churches preached sermons on the prevention of consumption on Tuberculosis day, which will be held on December 7 this year. It is hoped this year to swell the number of churches to 100,000 and to urge similar action besides in a large number of the schools and other societies. The Tuberculosis day campaign will come this year during the Red Cross Christmas seal sale. It is planned to urge the churches of the country to take a definite part in this movement. The observance of Tuberculosis day was endorsed last year by President Taft, Cardinal Farley, Colonel Roosevelt and many other prominent churchmen and public officials. Proclamations calling upon the people to observe this day were issued by governors of more than a dozen states and by the mayors of a considerable number of cities.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Weyl's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.
