A VIRGINIA HEN'S STUNT

Has Broken the Record, Making Good Claim to the Championship

Washington, Sept. 24—Not a single door knob counted, the world's champion hen has just laid 201 eggs since October 5. She is finishing strong and steady and probably will end the year with a round 300 eggs to her credit.

This hen belongs to E. W. Starnell, Alexandria, Va., and has been officially recognized on account of her record by the Department of Agriculture as entitled to the egg laying belt. The former record, held by a Salt Lake City hen, was 207 eggs in a year. The Mormon hen is thus put into the selling plater class by the Virginia model of poultry industry. Mr. Starnell figures that except for the moulting season his hen has produced an egg every twenty five hours throughout the year. She is not much for looks. She couldn't be told at a glance from any common ninety egg to the year hen, but for industry she probably is the world's model hen to date.

REPORT WAS A CANARD

A report was current on the streets yesterday afternoon that fourteen bodies had been taken out of the cars that went down in the Rock Island catastrophe on the Cimmaron. Inquiries at the Rock Island office's this morning revealed no foundation for such a report. It was stated that the cars and engine were still beneath the sand, entirely out of sight, and no efforts had been made to raise them.

DENIES THE CHARGE

"I see you are advertising that I have $100 to loan," said Jas Williamson of 827 South Seventh street, to the Express man. "I'm much obliged to you for the information," he continued "that's the first time I knew I had that much money. The first thing you know I'll be put down in the millionaire class and then I'll have a damage suit against you." Mr. Williamson was proceeding to get warm under the collar, when the Express man interrupted him by remarking that there was another Jim Williamson in the town who did have $100 in loose change and wanted to loan it. And then Jim coiled off.

(Associated Press.)

Buffalo, Sept. 25.—District attorney Jerome's candidacy for governor is practically withdrawn today at a meeting of the so-called Albany conference of anti-Hearst democrats.
