A Chickasha Dialogue.

The following amusing and instructive dialogue took place recently between the marshal, police and mayor of the city and one of a squad of tramps recently committed to jail:

"Whence came you?"

"From a town in the Indian territory called Siding No. 1."

"What's your business here?"

"To learn to subdue my appetite and to sponge my living from an indulgent public."

"Then you are a regular tramp, I suppose?"

"I am so recognized and accepted wherever I go."

"How can I recognize you as a tramp?"

"By the largeness of my feet and my general cannyerous appearance."

"How do you know yourself to be a tramp?"

"In seeking food; by being often denied, but ready to try again."

How gained you admittance to this town?"

"By means of my feet."

"How were you received?"

"On the end of Hard Gunnel's billy presented at my head."

"How did Gunnel's dispose of you?"

"He took me several times around the town, to the south, east and west, where he found the city marshal, Dave Hopkin, and police judge, Billy Cloud, where a great many questions were asked."

"What advice did Billy Cloud give you?"

"He advised to walk upright, regular steps to the next town."

"Will you be off or from?"

"With your permission I'll be off and leave at once."

"Which way are you traveling?"

"The high-way."

"Of what are you in pursuit?"

"Time. I want to kill him."

"My friend," said acting Mayor Billy Cloud, "you are now at an institution where the wicked are always troublesome and the weary are as tough as the rest. You will now be conducted to the middle chamber by a flight of stairs consisting of five or more steps. Instead of corn, wine and oil, the wages of the ancients, yours will be bread and water for five days. When your company escapes from here, divide yourselves into parties of three each and take a bee-line for a new town to be located in the north east corner of the Kiowa and Comanche country soon to be opened up, where they will run free soup houses, if necessary. Follow your guide and fear no danger—if you behave yourselves."
