SAID SHE WOULD FAINT

Mrs. Della Long Unable to Stand On Her Feet More Than a Few Minutes at a Time.

Pendergrass, Ga.—Mrs. Della Long of this place, in a recent letter, says: "For five or six years, I suffered agonies with womanly troubles. Often, I couldn't sit up more than a few minutes at a time, and if I stood on my feet long, I would faint. I took Cardul, and it helped me immediately. Now, I can do my work all the time, and don't suffer like I did. Take Cardul when you feel ill in any way—weak, tired, miserable, or under the weather. Cardul is a strength-building tonic medicine for women. It has been found to relieve pain and distress caused by womanly troubles, and is an excellent medicine to have on hand at all times. Cardul acts on the womanly constitution, building up womanly strength, toning up the nerves, and regulating the womanly organs. Its half century of success is due to merit. It has done good to thousands. Will you try it? It may be just what you need. Ask your druggist about Cardul. He will recommend it."

HOUSING POULTRY RIGHT

Good Feed and Care Are Wasted Unless Your Hens Have a Good House.

By D. J. LAMBERT,
 Poultry Instructor, B. I. State College.

Poultry keepers of today know that it pays to give laying hens a clean, dry, bright sunny house in which to live, especially during cold weather.

Hen houses for winter layers should be built as snug as possible on the three sides, north, east and west, and with an absolutely tight roof. The south side should be almost entirely open to the sun and air. Muslin curtains may be provided so as to partly close the front on very cold nights or during stormy weather. There is no danger from exposure in an open front house during the day or at night, provided that all openings are on one side and below a horizontal plane of the roosts. This open front must always face the south or southeast.

All poultry houses should be located where they will get the morning sun and should be elevated so that the rain and surface water will drain away from them.

An old style hen house can easily be remedied by tearing out the south front and leaving it open for sun and air. If the roof leaks, cover with roofing paper. Both ends and the back of the house should also be wind proof. If the house is more than eight feet high it should be sealed up about seven feet from the floor. Allow from three to four square feet of floor space for each hen.

September is the best month in all the year for the annual housecleaning. Remove all fixtures such as roosts, dropping boards and nests. Brush the cobwebs and dust from the walls and ceiling and remove the litter and dirt from the floors. Where floors are of earth remove as much as appears to be mixed with dirt or excrement.

Then with a spray pump or a brush apply lime wash to every part of the building. This lime wash is made by slaking rock lime with hot water and thinning to the consistency of skim milk. If 2 per cent of carbolic acid is added the wash will be more effectual as a disinfectant.

The roosts should be painted with kerosene, nests thoroughly cleansed and tobacco dust or stems added to the straw or sawdust nesting material. Cover the floor again with clean sand or fine gravel to the depth of four or six inches. If not too coarse this will provide a dust bath for the fowls. Where dropping boards are used under the roosts they help to keep the floor clean and facilitate the work of removing the manure.

ALFALFA

You Can Raise It—You Should Raise It.
 By WILLIAM O. WING
 Of James E. Wing & Bro., Alfalfa Farmers and Sheep Breeders.

There is not a farm that does not need alfalfa. There is not a farm that cannot grow alfalfa. Alfalfa is growing on the sands of Florida, on the red clays of Georgia, on nearly all the soils of Virginia, splendidly on different soil types of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and New England.

There remain no mysteries, no secrets, about alfalfa growing. All it asks is that the land be well drained, that it be fertile and with enough lime in it, that it have inoculation from another alfalfa field and have the seed. Given these things and alfalfa is as vigorous as a weed anywhere in America. True, it will not grow in wet land nor in cold, poor land nor in sour, unlimed soil; but, now, no one with sense sows it in such situations.

What alfalfa will do for the small farmer is this: It makes a feed as rich as oats for feeding his dairy cows or his working horses. It makes hens lay. It pushes the pigs forward cheaply. One can get five tons of alfalfa from one acre of good land. Five tons of good alfalfa hay are about equal in feeding value to 300 bushels of oats.

It would take five acres of your best land to make 300 bushels of oats, and they would need to be sown every year, whereas alfalfa once sown will come again and again for a term of years. Then oats or corn will drain the land of its fertility; alfalfa will fill it with nitrogen. If care is taken to keep the land stored with the mineral elements of fertility, its phosphorus, lime and potash, alfalfa will do the rest, for it gets its nitrogen from the air.

The large farm should have alfalfa, but the small farm must have it because of the need to make every acre do its best. Five tons of alfalfa hay may be worth to the farmer $25 or even more money, for alfalfa hay is a little richer than wheat bran in feeding value and it will make a great saving when the farmer comes to buy bran and grows his own supplies of protein.

From the farm itself should spring up the food for the animals of the farm. Alfalfa and corn will make milk and beef and pork without reliance on any other supplies than those which the farm affords. It is a sure crop than any other except the wild, native grasses upon the farm.

The village should have his plot of alfalfa for his fowls; not to let them run upon it steadily, for that might be injurious to the alfalfa, but to cut for them and for winter feeding. Alfalfa makes cheap and abundant eggs and fowls of the finest flavor.
