

PARKS IN PERIL FROM NEW ACTS

Private Interests Enabled to Destroy Beauty for Gain.

INVADE YELLOWSTONE

Provisions of Waterpower Law Too Broad and Must Be Changed.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Amendment of the new water power act so as to exclude the national parks from its provisions will be demanded of congress at its next session, it is announced by Robert Sterling Yard, executive secretary of the National Parks association. Mr. Yard also says that a fight will be made to have congress reject pending legislation, which, he asserts, opens the way for irrigation projects to drain on the parks for water.

Without amendment, Mr. Yard says the water power act is "the death warrant of our national parks system," because all government owned land and reservations are embraced within its terms, making it possible for private interests to erect dams, power houses, transmission lines and other structures by obtaining leases from the federal water power commission.

It was not until the water power bill reached President Wilson for approval that discovery was made by conservationists that national parks would be affected, and now the fight, Mr. Yard says, will be made for its amendment.

Besides the effort to change the waterpower act, Mr. Yard says an effort will be made to prevent favorable action on pending legislation, granting permission to private interests to build an irrigation reservoir in an obscure swamp in the southwestern corner of the Yellowstone national park, miles from any road. This measure, he asserts, would be the opening wedge for a number of irrigation plans for other national parks.

Mr. Yard anticipates that other legislation, including a proposal for damming Yellowstone lake, will be brought before congress, all of which he contends would tend to destroy the beauty of America's playgrounds.

"Conservation associations and many institutions throughout the country," Mr. Yard says, "are even organizing now for the defense of the parks. Our new national parks mark in the competition for the world's travel is likely to arouse a mighty storm of popular protest."

City and harbor of Trieste as they look today.

ROME, Italy, July 30.—The city of Trieste, to gain possession of which was one of Italy's main reasons for going to war with Austria, is prospering under Italian rule, according to a recent report published by the Italian minister of commerce. "Commercial conditions, both as regards maritime and railroad traffic have notably improved," reads the report. "During the first four months of the current year the exportations by water route reached more than 100,000 tons, while during the whole of 1919 they amounted to 120,000 tons. Importations by land route have reached 215,400 tons as compared with 42,200 tons for the four corresponding months of 1919. Maritime and railroad traffic shows for the first four months of 1920 a total increase of 200,000 tons as compared with corresponding months of 1919. It is believed that recent agreements mad between Italy, Czechoslovakia, Austria and Jugoslavia will result in the further development of commerce. Local Pastor Takes Good Report to Meeting at Wichita.

What the world service campaign of the Lutheran church will gain more than its goal of $2,000,000 was indicated in the reports of funds already raised in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, and Oklahoma made by the state chairmen at a district meeting in Kansas City Thursday, according to Rev. L. S. Kauffman, pastor of the First Lutheran church and chairman for this state. All Lutheran churches were asked to file their reports as soon as possible in order to complete the campaign by October 15.

Mr. Kauffman will go to Wichita, Kan., the latter part of next week in the interest of endowment contributions for Midland college at Fremont, Neb., the only Lutheran college in the middle west. Mr. Kauffman has already devoted two weeks to raising endowment funds for the college, which was removed to its present location from Atchison, Kan., about a year ago.

Girls Enjoy Sewing Circle for Dolls, Started at Y. W.

One little—two little—yes, twelve little girls spent the greater part of yesterday afternoon sewing for their "dolls" in the girls' work classrooms of the Y. W. C. A., thus disproving the oft-repeated assertion that dolls are nothing in the lives of little girls of 1920.

The girls were from 10 to 12 years of age and the occasion a dolls sewing circle inaugurated at their own request. They gathered before 3 o'clock, the hour set for the circle, and wished to remain after 5, the hour set for closing.

With true maternal solicitude, the girls sewed continuously, sitting in the chabroom chairs or on the divan and chaise lounge and stitching away seriously, with little waste of time in social converse. Garments upon which they were engaged were miniature dresses of varied material and design and more intimate articles for Miss Doll's wardrobe.

The dolls, which reclined or sat in doll fashion beside their "little mothers," varied in size from two feet to three inches, in type from blonde to brunette, in a "doll's crowning glory" from curly locks to, it must be confessed, no locks at all. For one doll, which its owner had had since she was two years old, was quite bald and with one leg missing. Each doll was the one most cherished by its little mistress.

A story telling hour for grade school girls will be conducted from 9:30 o'clock to 10:30 this morning by Yukola Gilbert and followed by the usual plunge in the pool.
