MARIE LOUISE SALON—A SHOP DE LUXE FOR DISCRIMINATING WOMEN

Discrimination stands for a great deal in the world of affairs and makes its appeal to all classes of people—in society and business. The society matron likes to show discrimination in her home or club entertainments; she likes to visit the smart shops which pay attention to these fine points that appeal, and rarely ever spends her money in a place where individuality and discrimination are not outstanding features.

Not quite a year ago, Tulsa's smart shops had a very attractive addition to their list in the Marie Louise Salon on South Main street. Mrs. Ione Millington threw open the doors of her millinery establishment here and asked the people of Tulsa to come and visit her. Amid the environment of music and flowers, the early hats of the fall and winter of 1919 were seen, on pedestal and in case, for their pleasure. Tulsa women were not shortighted when it came to visioning, in a receptive manner, the entire setting. Mrs. Millington evidenced the fact that she was a student of human nature and knew the matron or maid, purchasing a chapeau, wanted to buy in smart salons and try these bits of finery on amid the most enchanting surroundings. So that's what the Marie Louise salon has proved to be, the mecca where the discriminating women of the city go to buy their hats.

They decide between a Bruckweiss, a Joseph, a Hyland, Gage or Fisk, or perhaps choose something from the hand of some one of the six designers who are associated with Mrs. Millington. Between seasons the owner of these establishments visits the Emporium and Fashion Shows of the east and Chicago, where she obtains the latest word in what the women are to wear. She has learned Tulsa's taste for the beautiful, and large consignments of the best from Paris and the great shops of Fifth avenue are brought here for the benefit of Tulsa's women.

The message today from the Marie Louise Salon is to come and visit us and let us show you what you should wear. Let us "Doll you up."
