KLAMATH FALLS, MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1908.

It is very probable that the trade between the Philippines and the United States will increase to such proportions as to make that trade useful to both countries. But we cannot base our conduct or action on such a motive.—W. H. Taft.

Her name is Mrs. Hart O. Berg. She is the wife of the European agent of the Wright brothers. She is the first woman to ride in an aeroplane. Just now this is a current fact; some day it will be history.

The deliberate misrepresentations that sometimes characterize articles in the newspapers, should be left to lose their effect by the gradual discovery of the actual facts, and of the injustice of the criticism in the events which follow.—W. H. Taft.

In order to disprove his theory that ministers preach for the money they receive, the Rev. A. A. Tanner, pastor of the First Congregational church, of Alton, Ill., has refused a raise in salary. His congregation offered to raise the stipend from $1500 to $2000 a year, but he declined. The Rev. Tanner said he would rather see the money used for churches that are struggling in some of the smaller communities. He said he had enough to live on and was content.

After years of battling for a foothold in Ogden, Utah, the American party (anti-Mormon) entered the political field of that city by placing a full county and legislative ticket in the field last week. This means the anti-Mormons will try to capture Ogden, the second largest city in the state, as they have captured Salt Lake City. The movement against the Mormons there is headed by ex-Senator Frank J. Cannon, who has been ostracized from the Mormon church, though his father was one of the 12 apostles of Mormonism. The appearance of the American party has created a sensation in political circles as it means that the anti-Mormons will make a strong fight for the control of the city two years hence. The American party has elected a full ticket at Salt Lake in the past two campaigns, which have been fought with much bitterness.

Money is either an honest servant or a brutal slave holder.

The Atlantic fleet has made all that long voyage around the Horn to Japan for nothing. The Japanese government has decided to bar the geisha girls from the entertainments to be provided for the sailors.

Nothing can be more detrimental to the public interest than for any part of the people to take the law into their own hands. Assembled in a mob, they soon lose their conscience.—Wm. H. Taft.

Colonel Cody, the aeroplane inventor, was seriously injured last Friday when his machine fell 22 feet during an army test at Aldershot near London. The aeroplane was completely destroyed. The accident was witnessed by a score of army officers, who were attending the test. When Colonel Cody was picked up he was unconscious, but it is thought he will recover. The cause of the accident has not been discovered.

Baseball killed more people during the past few weeks than football has in 20 years, according to some of the physicians of the health department of New York City, who attribute the marked increase in the number of deaths from heart disease to the excitement attending the closing weeks of this season's pennant struggle. Last week there were 154 deaths of this character, compared with 129 for the corresponding week in 1907. In New York City the deaths from heart failure were 70, compared with 58 last season.

While his wife was absent from the room, John C. Wood, a wealthy resident of Santa Cruz, Calif., last Friday procured a shotgun, placed it against his body and blew away the greater part of his thorax, including the lungs. Despite his terrible injuries, Wood survived two hours. He returned last week from the St. Helena sanatorium, where he had been operated on for appendicitis. He appeared to be suffering great pain during the night. He had been ill for years. He was the owner of the Santa Cruz Mill & Lumber company.

A TEST OF COURAGE.

There were two dogs in the neighborhood that had a deep and insatiable antipathy to each other. Rover, the yellow dog, had the freedom of a large yard with a picket fence around it, and a gate that was always kept fastened. Prince, the brindle, roamed unchecked in the street outside. Whenever Prince came trotting along Rover would make a dash at the gate, and he being unable to get out, the two dogs would stand there, one on the inside and the other on the outside, glaring at each other with inextinguishable fury, barking, growling, and using violent language, the purport of which was that if it were not for that gate there would be some fierce and terrible fighting.

One morning Prince came along, looking more aggressive than usual. Rover saw him. The hair along his back bristled upward with a savage growl he ran down the front walk, and charged at the gate in his customary way. This time, however, by some unaccountable accident, the gate had been left unfastened, and the impact threw it wide open.

For the first time in all their acquaintance there was naught to hinder the two dogs from flying at each other. Nothing was between them but their long-standing grudge. Rover's impetus had carried him to the edge of the sidewalk. Prince was within two feet of him.

It was an awful moment. But neither dog hesitated the smallest fraction of a second. They acted instantly. With a dismal howl, Rover turned in his tracks and ran back to the yard at breakneck speed, and Prince fled for his life down the street, and never again, the neighbors say, did either dog even look at the other. Both were cowards, and both had found it out.—Youth's Companion.

There are said to be 1000 Esperanto societies and schools throughout the world now, and periodicals for propagating the language now number 55, 11 more than there were last December. Esperanto is gaining official recognition and privileges in Europe and Asia.
