Czar Takes Command of the Russian Armies—Retreat Across Galician Frontier Is Being Made Orderly and in Accordance With Prearranged Plans, Says Petrograd.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 8.—Russian artillery today is holding the Germans in check in the Riga region. While the Slavs are admitted to have retired across the Galician frontier east of Brody, on the southern extremity of the battle front, reports from the war office emphasized that the Russians are standing firm in the crucial engagement to the north.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 8.—The Grand Duke Nicholas has been succeeded in command of the Russian forces by the czar and has been appointed viceroy of Caucasus. It was officially announced today.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 8.—Other shakeups in the Russian military organization are promised as a result of the Slav retreat from Warsaw. CZAR TAKES COMMAND OF RUSSIAN ARMIES

PARIS, Sept. 8.—Czar Nicholas has taken over command of the Russian armies, according to announcement here.

News of this action was received here by President Poincaré in a dispatch direct from the czar.
