What the Picture Theaters Have to Tell You.

Great Moral Lesson in Fox Film of Yukon Country—Pastime Today, "Sins of Her Parent" is the new William Fox photoplay which will open at the Pastime theater today for a run of two days. Gladys Brockwell, who has supported William Fox in several of his biggest features is the star of this production. Miss Brockwell is really a double star for she portrays the parts of both mother and daughter.

The story tells how Richard Carver (Carl Von Schiller) goes to Alaska in search of the mother of his promised bride, Adrian Courtner (Gladys Brockwell). He finds that Valerie Marchmont, the mother, is a worthless woman, and he decides not to tell the girl. But Adrian has come to Alaska and found out for herself. In the end, Valerie redeems her past life by saving her daughter from disgrace. She is killed in a struggle with the saloon owner who is trying to force his attentions on Adrian and she leaves her daughter and Richard sorrowing by her side.

Vivian Martin at the Alta Friday and Saturday.

"The Golden Age of American History: the Era of Romance; that glorious time down south 'befo' de wah" is the story told in the truly wonderful photoplay coming to the Alta Friday and Saturday.

This Morosco-Paramount production, "Her Father's Son," is an unusual story of that delightful time just before the war clouds gathered. The glory of the Old South has never been pictured with more beauty or charm, and the quality of dainty Vivian Martin's rendering of the girl, who was "Her Father's Son," makes a photoplay not to be missed.

At the Cosy.

In one of the "light summer reading" magazines, of the recent "heated term" W. Carey Dunderly had a story that made the publication it appeared in sell several thousand copies above the average. It was entitled "The Price of Silence"—and you may have read it. At all events the story will be illustrated in Bluebird photoplays at the Cosy tonight under its original title, "The Price of Silence." The leading role will be assumed by Dorothy Phillips who will then make her first appearance as a star of Bluebirds. In her support will be Jack Mulhall, Jay Belasco, Frank Whitson, Lon Chaney, Evelyn Selbie and Vola Smith. The story reveals a woman's "past" and then goes on to picture a gripping drama, fraught with deep sympathy for the distressed heroine and ending in that happy feeling the picture "fan" possesses when a pretty girl gets out of a tense situation with credit and the villain is undone.

Claude Fleming Has Had Interesting Career.

Claude Fleming, who plays Dick Heider's friend, Torpenhow, in the film adaptation of Kipling's masterpiece, "The Light That Failed," produced as a Pathe Gold Rooster play and to be presented at the Temple theater for the last time tonight has appeared in a number of famous successes. He was born in New South Wales, Australia, and made his first appearance in England with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, as Tuffy in "Mystery" and Mr. Crisparkle in the "Mystery of Edwin Drood." He has been in many big musical successes. Those with which he has been identified include "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Merry Countess" and "Pretty Mrs. Smith." In the last named, he played opposite Fritzie Scheff.

"The Light That Failed" has been produced under the direction of Edward Jose who produced the famous "Iron Claw" serial and a number of other Pathe successes. Robert Edeson is the star, and the supporting cast includes in addition to Mr. Fleming, Jose Collins and Lillian Tucker.
