KIPLING DECLINES PROPAGANDA POST

LONDON, March 2.—Rudyard Kipling has declined the post of Director of Home Propaganda, which was offered to him by Lord Beaverbrook, the new Minister of Propaganda.

His reason for declining is not given but what most people are anxious to know is the reason for asking him to undertake a work so entirely out of his province.

Sir Edward Carson, who was Lord Beaverbrook's predecessor, announced that he will resume his law practice immediately.

In the absence of Sir John Simon, who is now in the army, Carson will be the leader at the common law bar.

MISS HELEN SIMON

This is Miss Helen Simon, who walks in this bathing costume to the ocean from her Palm Beach cottage every day on the tip of her toes, she practices this exercise to strengthen her feet, so she can dance longer and harder.

Any other country that might like to make a premature peace with Germany should study with diligence the surgical clinic now in progress along the Baltic.

HUNTING ALIEN TREASURE

FRANCIS P. GARVAN

Francis P. Garvan, who made his name as a prosecutor under District Attorney Jerome of New York county is now in charge of the search for enemy alien property in the United States. ### LOUISE GLAUM IS THE PEACOCK WOMAN IN NEW TRIANGLE PLAY

Never has Louise Glaum, known as the peacock siren of Triangle plays, worn such gorgeous clothes as those she affects in "Idolaters," which will be shown at the Arcade Theater, today.

Posed before an image of the sphinx in her Egyptian bedroom, a mirror held aloft in her hand and her long silken gown sweeping over a glass panel through which pours a golden light, she is the symbol of vanity. Another costume that will attract remark is a clinging creation of cloth of gold, straight of line and unadorned except for a cord around the waist. This gown was worn by Miss Glaum at a recent picture ball where she led the grand march. The Oriental motif, ever dominant in her costumes, is evident in a boudoir garment, consisting of harem trousers and a panel of black velvet, against which a long string of pearls is outlined, hangs from the shoulders down the front of this costume.

The star has the role of a vanity-stricken woman who uses no scruples in attaining success on the stage. Her love of luxury, indicated by the Egyptian "love nest" that she occupies, carries her beyond sanity. Retribution of ironic force is visited upon her, when, in a moment of rage, she kills a lover who has sacrificed his own career for her. She is forced to flight and her only refuge is in a sordid tenement of an ugliness which she always has loathed.

Alta Today. The sensational series of pictures.

"The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras" will be one of the attractions at the Alta today. These pictures are actual scenes taken at the battle and the pictures are being shown by the British War Relief Commission part of the proceeds going to this commission. Patrons who desire an inside view of the workings of a large army, preparations for battle, artillery firing, placing of big guns in front line defense, bringing up of supplies will do well to see these interesting pictures.

William Fox presents the super-picture de luxe, "The Trouble Makers" with Jane and Catherine Lee, and the wonderful child actresses, and the vaudeville end of the program comes well recommended, consisting of Bob and Peggy Valentine in singing, talking and dancing and Waldo & De Roy with a team of clever comedy musical artists.

PASTIME TODAY.

Girl in Auto Held Up and Payroll Stolen.

"I guess I must have forgotten what nerves are," admitted Miss Carol Holloway, Vitagraph's great star of adventure, as she permitted herself to be helped from a battered racing automobile on the edge of the vast California desert after playing heroine in the most sensational and realistic payroll robbery every staged in the great outdoors.

It is the fate of Miss Holloway in the ninth episode in "The Fighting Trail," Vitagraph's serial of love, adventure and intrigue. Nan (Miss Holloway), knowing her peril, starts across the desert from camp to the mine with the payroll and is pursued by the outlaws in another car. Pastime today.

Daily Chats With the Housewife

POLICING THE WASTE.

The housewife in England who is found throwing away an edible slice of bread may be imprisoned or fined as much as $200. There are similar fines for wasting eggs by making cake that is too rich, for wasting sugar in frostings and for feeding crumbs to a canary.

In France the taking of pastry or biscuits from flour that is fit for bread is prohibited. The person who is found eating pastries in a public eating place is liable to imprisonment or fine.

But in America the housewife is put on her honor to conserve food and abolish extravagant habits. She is her own policeman.

A shining example of how quickly and enthusiastically the housewives of America have responded to this honor system in conserving food is to be found in the garbage collection in the principal cities of the country. The last November garbage collection was 11 per cent lower than the November collection of 1916. The housewives of Galveston, Texas, broke the record for any individual city by reducing their garbage collection to two-thirds less than what it was last November!

This shows what splendid results may be obtained when American women once set their shoulders to a task. There is hardly a woman in the country now who has not stopped the leaks in her kitchen through which edible, wholesome food formerly found its way into the garbage can.

There are, on the other hand, many women who are scrupulous in most ways about saving food, but who are unconsciously wasting a considerable amount of the most needed food for the allies—wheat.

Whenever wheat flour is used when rye, cornmeal, or barley might have been substituted for it either in whole or in part, the wheat is being wasted almost as much as if it were thrown into the garbage can. At any rate it isn't going to feed a soldier as it should.

This applies to the making of cakes, puddings and pastry as well as to the making of bread. It is unfair for any housekeeper to make these more or less fancy dishes out of all wheat and so use up the flour that her neighbor is carefully saving by eating Victory Bread.

It is unnecessary on the other hand to give up cakes and puddings altogether for all of these may be made with combination flours with only a small proportion of wheat, or as many ingenious housekeepers have already found, they may be made without any wheat at all as the following recipe shows:

Sponge Cake.
4 eggs.
1 cup sugar.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
2-8 teaspoon salt.
1 cup barley flour.

Separate the whites and yolks of eggs, beat yolks, add lemon juice and sugar, then flour. Fold in well-beaten whites of eggs and bake in slow oven.

THE FIVE LITTLE PIGS.
This Little Pig Went to Market.
He bought sugar and flour to hoard away and the only reason he didn't buy ten times more butter than he needed was because he thought the price might go down.

This Little Pig Stayed at Home.
When there was Red Cross work to be done and she was badly needed.

This Little Pig Had No Rest.
on Wheatless Day in spite of all the food administration's requests, and with the knowledge of what it meant to France for him to be so selfish.

This Little Pig Had None. but he left sugar in the bottom of his coffee cup, ate white bread on Wheatless Day and consumed candy just as usual.

This Little Pig Cried.
"Wee wee, let George Do It, Don't Touch Me!"
Have You a Little Pig at Home?
DO YOU KNOW YOUR FAMILY?
This matter of war food cannot always be worked out just the same in every family. That is why the U. S.
