NATURALIST SAYS FLIES WILL SWARM NEXT WEEK

Swallows Due to Migrate About August 2, Then Typhoid Pests Have Their Innings

University of Oregon, Eugene, July 22—On or about August 2, a week from next Monday, the swallows will leave Oregon. Then look out for flies. This is the prediction of Dr. C. F. Hodge, the naturalist at the University of Oregon, who has spent more than a year in the state studying biological conditions and their effect upon living conditions in Oregon.

Dr. Hodge's students are this week conducting a fly census or survey of the city of Eugene, which is the only place in the state in which an anti-fly sanitation campaign has been conducted for more than one year. In this, the second summer of Dr. Hodge's work, Eugene has been so nearly flyless that the city health officer felt able to state that there was scarcely enough breeding stock left to supply Eugene with flies next year. This Dr. Hodge believes is too strong a statement. He says preventive work has been good enough to have considerable effect with the help of the swallows, which are the busiest fly catchers, but that August 2 there has got to be a more thorough cleaning up or old time fly conditions will be repeated.

Nineteen other cities started anti-fly work this year but none of them has approached success so closely as Eugene. Dr. Hodge believes, however, that the educational work has been sufficient to furnish a good basis for satisfactory elimination next year.

FOREST FIRE BULLETIN

Portland, Ore., July 31—Several hundred forest fires successfully handled with practically no loss of green timber is the Pacific northwest record for the driest July since 1916, according to bulletins received from a number of states by the Western Forestry & Conservation Association. Fires for the most part have been in old slashings or burns, and while filling the country with smoke and in places severely taxing the patrol forces, prompt action has robbed them of the usual toll of green timber or logging equipment. The woods are now extremely dry, and although the full patrol force is on duty, the utmost vigilance will have to be exercised to prevent disastrous fires. The worst of the fire season is still to be passed through.

Washington had 75 fires during July, nearly all of them being slashing fires. A few logs were burned as well as some camp equipment, and the improvement of one settler. Accurate figures on losses are not available but the amount is small taking into account the number of fires occurring. Donkey engines, locomotives, berry pickers, and lightning are given as the causes of the fires. About 100 men are on patrol duty for the Washington Forest Fire Association, while the State Fire Warden has on some 70 men.

Idaho in common with other states has experienced high temperatures and practically no rain during July. A number of fires have started but prompt discovery has practically prevented loss. A small amount of green timber has been fire-killed. Campers, lightning and brush-burning are responsible for nearly all fires which have occurred in the state. The full patrol force is on duty.

Montana has experienced no severe fires. The State and Forest Service are cooperating in an effort properly to cover the timbered sections adjacent to the National Forests.

Oregon reports about 100 fires for the month, the most severe ones being in old slashings. An inconsiderable amount of green timber has been fire-killed. The State Forester has 90 men on patrol paid by State and Weeks law funds and private owners are employing 300 wardens. Telephone service which has been greatly improved the past year is proving a marked factor in protection work. High winds, hot weather and practically no precipitation have put the woods in dangerous condition.

Reports from portions of California indicate more favorable conditions than last season, while contrary is true elsewhere in the northwest.

Throughout the northwest the preparations made early in the season to meet a bad year are proving extremely helpful. Never before has such close working cooperation existed between the Government, States, and private patrols, and to this can be largely attributed the success of the work up to the present time. From now on hunters and campers will be going into the mountains, and their cooperation is needed to prevent fires. Loggers, road builders and ranchers should be doubly careful with fires. Only through such care will serious fires be averted.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR LOCALS

It was the same old story over again at Woodland last Sunday and this time the score was 12 to 5. Which was a rather poor score for the boys to run up on that bunch over there, it had ought to have been about 25 to 5. Those who took the trip over had a nice time as far as the trip was concerned, but as far as the exhibition of the great national game went the less said the better.

The Woodland team has been beaten so many times at the hands of St. Helens that when they go into a game they are beaten before the game starts, and the St. Helens players regard it more or less of a joke to play them, and take no interest in the game whatever. The same Sunday was featured by the rag chewing and crabbing of the Woodland players and the only one on that team who seemed to have any semblance to a good clean sport and a gentleman was Hogget who played first base.
