ST. HELENS TEAM WINS VICTORY

mann batting for his brother walked. Stewart safe on McDonald's error, allowing Marble to register the run that tied up the score. Kutola flied to McDonald. Alex caused Gravelle to lay down an easy one.

Hall doubled to right. McDonald laid down neat sacrifice, Hall taking third, and Steve broke up the game by a clean single through the short patch.

Woodland 0 0 0 0 1 1 0 1—3

Notes of the Game

In the third Donaldson struck out three men and repeated the trick in the fifth.

St. Helens had no men left on bases, the first time in our baseball experience that we have seen this happen.

Charlie Moore is of valuable aid to Manager Ballagh in showing the boys some inside ball. It was this that won the game.

The Kirkpatricks are scheduled here next Sunday. A large crowd should attend and show their appreciation of the good work of the Sox.

LOUIS GUISTO

Guisto, Portland's first baseman who Walter McCredie predicts will make the followers of the national game forget about Cobb and Jackson when he gets into the big brush. When you say Guisto, you mean the whole Portland team. Guisto, so far this season, has poled ten home runs and fielded his position almost perfectly. It's a safe bet he won't be with Portland next season.

CLASS ODE

(Published by request.)
Our school days here are over
Some say "The victory's won,"
But, classmates dear, just listen,
Our tasks are just begun.
For years we've stood together,
In dark days and in gold;
Ah, yes, these years have been
The happiest ever told.
And still we shall always cherish
Our teachers kind and true,
And memory will make sweeter
The deeds we try to do.
Perhaps some of us may wander off to
A foreign strand,
So we will give you all a greeting
As we grasp your friendly hand.
Oh, classmates dear, our love for you
Has ever fonder grown.
And often in life's fleeting years
Our hearts for you will yearn.
And may you, too, in coming years,
Amidst of changing scenes,
Find a loving place in all your hearts
For the class of old sixteen.
Now when we face the world alone,
Tossed here and there by fate,
Don't stop at one dead on your way,
For you may be too late.
There is a goal for us to attain,
Off hidden by land and sea,
But surely we can reach it,
In this wide country.
Schoolmates, beloved schoolmates,
Where fortune points her finger,
May honor be our guiding star
To help those who need its guiding
us from afar;
Let the memories linger of the days
gone by.
And may we ne'er forget dear old
St. Helens High.
—Ethel M. Drew.

OREGON WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW

The following extracts are taken from an address delivered by Carl Abrams of the State Industrial Commission, Salem, Oregon, on the actual results attained by the Oregon Workmen's Compensation law since its inception. This law has been sustained by the people on a referendum vote and has also been declared constitutional by the Supreme Court of Oregon in an unanimous decision.

"The commission has been doing business for twenty months and during that time has shown rapid growth and produced gratifying results. We have collected to March 1, 1916, $1,000,753.26 from the following sources: Employer, $751,932.47; workmen, $123,328.79; state, $125,492.

"In addition there is now due from the employers $50,000 and from the state $50,000, or total resources of $1,100,753.26 for the entire period.

We have paid out as follows:

"Set aside with state treasurer to pay pensions, $216,433.14; for time lost, $243,775.29; hospital and medical attention (not to exceed $250 in any case), $116,340.62; burial expense, (not over $100 in any case), $7,841.48; administrative expense, including all expense of eight months preliminary organization, $192,323.36; total, $787,618.89.

"Balance on hand $213,134.37 and $100,000 due, or total resources of $313,134.37, exclusive of pension fund.

"The commission has handled 8,251 non-fatal injuries and 108 fatal cases or a total of 8,359 claims during its life of twenty months, and had four appeals from its decision.

"The supreme court in two separate suits, has emphatically upheld the constitutionality of the act on as many different counts as could be raised. It has also established the fact that compensation is the exclusive remedy for injured workmen, when they are working under the act. This has been the greatest relief to employer, as it is the only kind of insurance that can be bought which absolutely protects him, not only financially, but also against the possibility of suit being brought against him by the worker.

"While it is conceded that the principles of the compensation law have been established firmly in Oregon and a large number of other states, a controversy still exists as to the best method of insuring the compensation payments. In several states the employer is free to insure with stock companies, employer's mutuals, state insurance funds, or, if he so wishes, carry no insurance whatever. In other states, as in Oregon, insurance is restricted to the state accident fund. Under the various forms of insurance permitted under the laws of the different states, experience will be had which will demonstrate the better method.

"With the large proportion of premiums required by stock companies to cover expense and profits, we are confident that a state compensation fund, administered with efficiency and reasonable economy, will best stand the test of experience above referred to.

"Aside from the attitude maintained in the settlement of claims, an important phase of the compensation system is the cost of administration. A tabulation of the experiences of all companies writing compensation insurance in the state of Wisconsin during the year 1914 shows that employers insuring with stock companies were required to pay an average of $2.67 to provide the injured workmen with $1 in benefits. The experience of the insurance company which, through its agents, has been most effective in opposition to the Oregon act, charged the employers of Wisconsin $2.62 for every dollar paid out in 1914 on account of benefits to injured workmen.

"In Oregon during the first twelve months the law was in operation, only $1.13 1-3 has been required to place $1 in benefits in the hands of injured workmen. This difference in cost is emphasized when it is recalled that Wisconsin has an area of but 55,000 square miles, a population of 2,323,860 and an average of 42.2 people to the square mile, while Oregon, with its 96,699 square miles of territory, 672,765 of population and an average of 7 people to the square mile, presents conditions under which the cost might properly be expected to be much greater.

"The earned premiums of stock companies in Wisconsin in 1914 amounted to $1,424,278. Of this sum 48 per cent was paid or is to be paid in compensation benefits, 28 per cent was required in expenses, and 14 per cent remained as profits, or a total for expenses and profits of 52 per cent. In Oregon last year the compensation benefits paid out or set aside totalled $376,209.46.

The administrative expense amounted to $49,582.05, making a total of benefits and expenses of $419,728.51. With the same proportion of income used in expenses and profits, the stock companies would have required the sum of $771,259.95 to have handled the insurance subject to the Oregon act during the past twelve months, a saving in favor of the Oregon method of $351,522.44."
