

CORRESPONDENCE

WARREN

The warehouse directors met on Saturday evening and elected the following officers: A. L. Larson, president and John Farr, secretary and treasurer. The office of manager has not yet been filled as the directors wish to secure a competent man for on his ability will depend much of the success or failure of the enterprise. Articles of incorporation are now ready and will be filed soon with the county clerk and secretary of state. A site has not yet been selected but there are several under consideration.

The Home Guards have not as yet received their uniforms although the order and money was sent in over three months ago owing, so the Portland representatives say, to the government taking charge of the factory. Much impatience is manifest among the members and the matter will be settled this week. No rifles are to be had and action looking to the supply of them will be taken shortly.

The farmers say it will be a problem to get it all threshed, the crop is so heavy and they are also experiencing difficulty owing to the shortage of help. Another thing one could not help noticing on the plains and in the Rocky mountains is the little huts in the most unexpected places with the service flag and Red Cross emblem.
