PATRIOTISM

THE GOVERNOR of the State and the Mayor of St. Helens proclaimed November 11th, 1918, a holiday to celebrate the signing of the armistice between the Central Empires and the Allies.

The Mayor made a personal canvas of the business houses, all of whom agreed to close at noon and remain closed the remainder of the day.

The majority of the merchants remained closed as agreed, as they considered their promise to the Mayor 100 per cent American

Why cannot all the merchants agree to do the right thing with one another and

Stay With It

We believe the public will endorse the action of the merchants who stayed by their agreement and remained closed.
