EVA NOVAK

and a notable cast in the Comedy
Sensation of the year—

"Up In Mary's Attic"

The story of this fascinating comedy is sufficient in itself, yet seldom has a picture been produced which contains every element of appeal so deftly and cleverly interwoven as in "Up In Mary's Attic." Its many human touches make it a production whose sunshine and shadows will not soon be forgotten.

The dear little baby, with its unconscious humor will tug at every heart. Its gripping appeal furnishes a note of human interest throughout.

Those in search of a thrill will find it in the many tense situations such as the Vampire Nest Cabaret.

Those who look for unadulterated humor without too much slapstick yet with many a hearty, wholesome laugh, will find a plentiful and varied collection of uproarious situations.

Those who delight in a decorative scheme of feminine charm and beauty will most certainly be rewarded.

In fact, the picture has everything—pep, humor, romance, adventure, thrills and human interest. There is no monotony; the suspense holds to the very end. It is a picture with a purpose, that spreads sunshine and good humor without recourse to outrageous comicallities.

The picture could offer nothing but its gripping heart interest—or only its intriguing appeal—or just its wholesome pep and genuine fun—and score a knock-out.
