President Roosevelt's message to congress is a masterpiece from a master hand. He recommends in no uncertain terms the passage of laws that will curb the trusts and stop the big frauds in government land.

Of course there are doubters and knockers at the Innaha copper mines, but one sure thing the copper is there in quantities sufficient to pay working, and capital is going after it. The doubting Thomases will never get any of it either. They talked a few years ago about a person is unable to tell what is under the ground and would not encourage a prospector because they did not know that there was a mine in Innaha country. Of course there is not a mine in that section and if there was it could not be secured for a few dollars. There are many promising prospects on the Innaha and it remains for capital to make mines out of them. The knockers will not have a hand in it.

A Chemawa Graduate.

A story published in the Telegram from the Pendleton Tribune is one of many that might be told showing how difficult, if not entirely vain, is the attainment of the desired result in the work being carried on by the Government of educating Indian youth in schools. Jennie Peo, a Umatilla Indian woman was graduated at Chemawa and went home—to do what? What use had she for her education? What could she do with it? It was too hard a problem for her so she relapsed into a mere Indian squaw again, married a mere buck Indian, and not being satisfied with him, estranged the affections of another squaw's husband, and the two women had a rough-and-tumble, hair-pulling, face-scratching mud-rolling fight in a Pendleton street. What good did the "education" do? May it not have done more harm than good? It might be too much to say that this and many other incidents that might be narrated prove conclusively that the system of Indian education is an entire failure, but they do prove that it is, a failure to a great extent. It will take not a few years, but several generations to educate the Indians into citizens anywhere nearly approaching the Caucasian standard. As a rule after their education is gained, they relapse, either swiftly or gradually, into their old life.

Pacific Coast Cities Win.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided the main points in contention between Pacific Coast and interior cities in relation to freight rates to this Coast in favor of the Coast cities. It will be remembered that certain middle cities led by St. Louis and seconded by Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis/St. Paul, complained that the difference between carload rates on westbound freight from those cities was too great. The object was to enable the jobbing houses of those cities to sell the goods in less than carload lots within territory naturally tributary to San Francisco and Portland. The defense was that water transportation from the Atlantic seaboard or Europe fixed or limited the rates on carload lots by rail, and also that such competition does not apply to less than carload lots, the Coast cities were entitled to the usual railroad discrimination between such lots and carload lots—that, in brief, the coast cities were entitled to their position as shippers.

The commission finds that some changes in rates should be made as to which farther testimony is to be taken, but the main point for which the Coast cities contended is sustained. Each city has some geographical advantage; our advantage is that mentioned of long-distance water transportation if necessary. If the railroads become too exacting. The reason of the decision is that if railroads were required to carry intermediate traffic at rates at which they except through traffic, they would lose the operation, and in order to make the local traffic pay, without a heavy discrimination in favor of through traffic, they would have to put up the local traffic rates to such a point as would oblige them to give up the through traffic to water competing points. Hence the policy is to carry through freight at a small profit, and to add to that profit by charging higher rates to interior points.

But what the Middle West cities conceding the soundness of this theory, was lower rates on less than carload lots, so they could control the territory almost to the very doors of the Coast cities. But in this, according to the tenor of the decision, they will fail.—Telegram.

PULLMAN ORDINARY SLEEPERS.

The tourist travel between the East and the Pacific Coast has reached enormous proportions in the last few years, and calls for a special class of equipment. To meet this demand the Pullman Company has issued from its shops what it technically calls the "Pullman Ordinary Sleeper." These cars appear similar to the regular sleepers being built on the same plan, but not furnished with the same elegance. They are equipped with mattresses, blankets, sheets, pillows, pillow-cases, towels, combs, brushes, etc., requiring nothing of the kind to be furnished by the passenger. Each car has a stove for making tea and coffee and doing "light housekeeping," and each section can be fitted with an adjustable table. A uniformed porter accompanies each car, his business being to make up berths, keep the car clean, and look after the wants and comforts of the passenger. In each of the trains which are dispatched daily from Portland by the O. R. & N. Co. is to be found one of these "Pullman Ordinary Sleepers." The car attached to the "Chicago-Portland Special" goes through to Chicago without change, and the one in the "Atlantic Express" runs to Kansas City without change. Passengers in this car for Chicago change to a similar car at Granger.

Much of the first class travel is being carried in these cars, the rates being lower, and the service nearly equal to that in the palace sleepers.

For rates and full information, including folders, write to
