Paradise Glints.

Paradise, May 7.—J. B. Ready of Enterprise was here recently.

Police Brothers and Cole Brothers passed through here with a fine bunch of fat hogs bound for Lewiston. Lake Osburn and Harve Hendrickson made a trip to Lewiston.

Ray Renfrow sold his 80 acre farm to Thomas Boone.

The protracted meetings held at Paradise and Flora by Rev. Jackson, have closed. Over 100 persons united with the Christian church during the revival at the two places.

J. A. Stowell and wife made a business trip to Astoria this week.

The Flora Journal in the issue of April 30, goes for the Paradise correspondent of the News Record and desires of wants explanation, and uses the words "Barbed Wire Steal." I did not use those words but said the wire was taken from a fence near Paradise, and had been on the fence about seven years; was there when the present owner bought the farm. As to being hard on the neighbors, I just told the truth. The word "steal," was used in regard to some bacon and grain that was stolen in Lower Paradise. I will say in regard to the item, if the Journal or the person or persons referred to don't like the paragraph in regard to the barbed wire, they can appeal to the courts and find out something.

Feats That Never Happened.

A grotesque and foolish view of the west leads many who are not acquainted with that part of the country to perpetrate amusing blunders regarding the possibilities of the typical western weapons, the rifle and the six shooter. To shoot an animal's eye out at a hundred paces is a common feat in wild west literature. Sometimes it is done with a six shooter—in type, not anywhere else. Of course, no man can see the eye of an animal that far. I have had a good rifleman tell me he could cut off a robin's head at a hundred steps. The truth is that he could not see the head clearly that far. You read that the desperado Slade could with a six shooter at fifty or sixty steps hit a man in any button of his coat that he chose, but you may be sure that neither Slade nor any one else could do anything of the kind. Even trick and fancy shooting at its best could ever cover feats ascribed as matters of course to the average frontiersman by those devotees of frenzied fiction who never saw the frontier.—Outing Magazine.

Eluding the Officers.
Here is an amusing description of one of Balzac's periods of impecuniosity. Mery, the poet, a great friend of Balzac, was an inveterate gambler and rarely left the card table before daybreak. His way lay past the Cafe de Paris, and for four consecutive mornings he had met Balzac strolling leisurely up and down dressed in a pantalon a pieds (trousers not terminating below the ankle, but with feet in them like stockings) and frock coat with velvet facings. The second morning Mery felt surprised at the coincidence; the third he was puzzled; the fourth he could hold out no longer and asked Balzac the reason of these nocturnal perambulations roundabout the same spot.

Balzac put his hand in his pocket and produced an almanac showing that the sun did not rise before 3:50. "I am being tracked by the officers of the tribunal de commerce and obliged to hide myself during the day, but at this hour I am free and can take a walk, for as long as the sun is not up they cannot arrest me."

Equal to the Occasion.
The author of "Across England in a Dogcart" once stopped to examine a church in the little village of Enstone.

The day was warm, and on leaving the church I rested for awhile in the grateful shade of the building and for the sake of the coolness less kept my hat in my hand. While standing there I overheard one workman ask of another:

"Why do 'e keep 'is 'at off like that out of doors, mate?"

"'Cause 'e's a Quaker, o' course," replied the mate. "Quakers alius do in churchyards."

Here was an opportunity not to be lost. "No," said I, "I am not a Quaker. I am an Episcopalian."

There was a short, awkward pause. Then the first workman, evidently of an inquiring turn of mind, said to his fellow mason, who seemed to be considered an authority:

"A Episcopale one, 'e says 'e is. Wot's that, Bill?"

"Oh," replied the learned Bill, quite equal to the occasion, "that's one of them fancy foreign religions, sure!"

Used by the Multitude.
Levy's Oregon Grape Compound. For general spring tonic. Sold and guaranteed by Burnaugh & Mayfield.

The Word "Wallop."
The origin of the familiar vernacular verb "to wallop" is not generally known. It comes from the family name of the earls of Portsmouth. Sir John Wallop, K. G., was admiral commander in the reign of King Henry VIII. of the fleet which avenged French raids by burning French ships and twenty-one French villages. This was called, in the current parlance of the times, "walloping" them, and the phrase passed into the language and still survives.

Levy's Oregon Grape Compound. Sold and guaranteed by Burnaugh & Mayfield, Enterprise, Oregon.

Too Great a Strain.
Every once in awhile the actor while taking the part of a duke in a play would spend large sums of his stage money. On one of these occasions it seemed too much for a certain person in the audience, who a voice rang shrill and clear through the house. "Hey, Bill, how about that five you owe me?"—New York Herald.

Not Flattery.
"I wonder why you love me, dear." "That's strange. I've asked myself the same question a thousand times."

SPENCER F. EDDY.

New Minister to Serbia and His Unusual Romance.

Spencer F. Eddy, who was recently appointed by President Roosevelt as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Roumania and Serbia, will combine with his duties in that capacity the work of American diplomatic agent in Bulgaria. Mr. Eddy has been called the best dressed American in Europe and is one of the handsomest. He was born in Chicago thirty-four years ago and educated at Harvard and in Germany. He speaks several foreign languages fluently and is a born diplomat. He was private secretary to the late John Hay when the latter was ambassador at the court of St. James and later was made third secretary of legation. Subsequently he became second secretary of legation at Paris and from there was promoted to be first secretary at Constantinople, serving as charge d'affaires during periods when important matters were under consideration and distinguishing himself by his able conduct in his post. He gained a reputation for ability to deal with difficult questions through his connection with the negotiations regarding the rescue and ransom of the captured missionary, Miss Ellen Stone. From the Turkish capital he was sent to St.

SPENCER F. EDDY.

Petersburg and was charge d'affaires there in the absence of Ambassador Meyer during a critical juncture of the war between Russia and Japan.

An episode in Mr. Eddy's career at the time of the Victorian jubilee of 1897 was an adventure he had during a London fog with a fair Russian princess in which he saved her from being trodden on by horses in the streets of the English metropolis when the mist was so thick it was impossible to find one's way. The incident was made the foundation for a romance entitled "Love in a Fog," which attracted attention at the time. It was rumored that Mr. Eddy was much smitten with the beautiful Russian of his adventure, but, however that may be, no nuptial ceremony resulted, and instead, about three years ago, he married into the wealthy Spreckels family of San Francisco. Mr. Eddy was charge d'affaires at Berlin for a year following his service at St. Petersburg and in 1907 was appointed minister to Argentina, from which post he has now been transferred to Roumania and Serbia. It used to be said of Mr. Eddy that he was equally at home leading a colt on or as tackle on a football team.
