Play That Brought Her First Success

Friday Night's Bill at Opera House Won Fame For Miss Tucker.

Both of last week's offerings by the Ethel Tucker company were splendidly presented and the audiences were pleased.
 The company is growing in favor and the various members are giving evidence that their selection was carefully made. Friday night of this week, Queena, a charming four act play, will be given, and on Saturday night a big triple bill is the attraction.

Queena holds you interested for something over two hours and sends you home with the feeling that you have spent an evening quite worth while.
 High class acting, a blending of healthy, bright comedy and pathos, so natural and free from mandarin sentiment as to cut deep, make Queena one of the most appealing plays that have been seen this season. Queena is also the play that brought Miss Ethel Tucker her first success—gave her the position among prominent managers and the standing in her profession which has ever since placed her among the foremost emotional actresses.
 In the play the gowns she wears and those worn by the other ladies of the company are "Visions" of the dressmakers art.
 The company won commendation for the unusual attention given to the stage settings. In Queena they intend to surpass all that they have so far done.
 The following letter from the late Richard B. Hubbard is a glowing tribute to Miss Tucker's acting.
 Tyler, Texas, Feb. 3, 1909
 Miss Ethel Tucker, My Dear Madam,
 It affords me sincere pleasure to express, in this informal way, my high appreciation of your rendition of the part of "Queena" the heroine in the drama of that name, at the Grand last evening in this city. That difficult part, from the first to the last act, (but especially in the mad scene) was superb and touching and was worthy of the better plays of the drama and the stage. Therefore, congratulate you. Wishing you a long and yet more brilliant career in your chosen profession.
 I am yours very truly,
 Richard B. Hubbard.
