Afflictions.
Stars shine brightest in the darkest night; torches are better for heating; grapes come not to the proof till they come to the press; spices smell best when bruised; young trees root the faster for shaking; gold looks brighter for scouring; juniper smells sweetest in the fire; the palm tree proves the better for pressing; camomile the more you tread it the more you spread it. Such is the condition of all God's children. They are then most triumphant when most tempted, most glorious when most afflicted.—Bogatzky.

MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES FINE

MUSIC AND SPEAKING AS WELL
AS SPLENDID DINNER ENJOYED.

Memorial Day exercises were followed Monday in accordance with the program already published, concluding with a most bountiful dinner given by the ladies of the local Improvement League. From the morning when the graves in the cemetery were decorated, until the conclusion of the dinner in the hall, the day passed in a continued appropriate observation of the occasion.

As early as 8 o'clock friends of the departed visited the cemetery, strewing the graves with flowers and greening life as symbols of remembrance and as a token that though many have departed still they are not dead. Later in the forenoon, beginning with 9 o'clock friends and relatives of the departed living swelled the crowd at the cemetery, until the lot was well filled with people. The decorations were made with loving hands and sympathetic minds. One beautiful feature throughout was the decorating of graves by others than the immediate relatives, showing a brotherhood and sisterhood unconfined to the limits of a single family. In this way all the graves were remembered, and the sight presented by lilies, carnations, evergreen, wild flowers, smilax, and many varieties of living plants, was a benediction unto life and a joy even in the midst of human sorrow.

Dinner a Success.

The dinner given by the ladies of the Improvement League was a splendid one and netted a sum of $65 to the league. The ladies of the league desire to extend their deep gratitude to all those ladies not members of the organization, who came so generously and helped make the dinner a success. Also to extend their thanks publicly to the young ladies who so ably waited upon the tables, both at the dinner Monday and at the banquet given by the Commercial club the evening of "Tom Richardson Day". Altogether some $75 or $77 were taken in at the Memorial Day dinner, and in that considerable of the dinner was donated, the net profits of the league were a large proportion of the gross result. In this way the league will soon have funds enough to carry forward their cemetery project, and thus meet the commendation of all here.

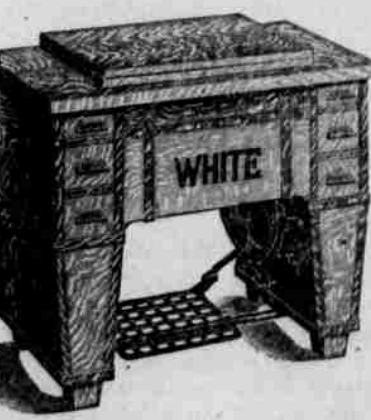

Mr. and Mrs. Z. E. Fanning and two little children returned to their home Monday morning, in Lind, Wash. They had been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lefell of this city.

Osteopathic Profession Grieves.

A telegram has been received by Dr. Moore announcing the death of Mrs. Andrew Taylor Still of Kirksville, Mo., the wife of the illustrious founder of the science of osteopathy. Mrs. Still was about 77 years old, and held a unique position in the osteopathic profession. It is realized that her loyalty and faithfulness during the years of severe denial at the time of the "Old Doctor's" (as he is lovingly called) discovery and development of osteopathy was one of the sustaining factors in giving the world this great healing science. The early period of osteopathic development meant being scoffed at as well as poverty of the direst kind, for people were slow to give Dr. Still any encouragement and through years and years of reverses he continued to study the body and build his foundation for a true system of healing and through it all Mrs. Still showed loving loyalty and lived her sweet life uncomplainingly. So Mrs. Still likewise was considered a great benefactor, and was finally blessed with the contentment which follows success after great trials, and lived to see the "Old Doctor" reap his just reward of one of the world's greatest benefactors, while she enjoyed the love and admiration of the osteopathic world.
