TWO KINDS OF ADS.

To real estate advertisers in search of a quick market the advice of Joseph P. Day, a New York real estate broker who believes in live advertising in live mediums, ought to be especially valuable. Mr. Day says: "The sort of man you are trying to reach determines somewhat the style and size of an advertisement. The man who knows what he wants and is looking for it may search for your small advertisement in the crowd. But he will surely see your advertisement if you offer what he wants prominently. But the man who doesn't know that he wants any property at all or who does not know what he wants in the line of real estate will never search the columns for little advertisements. He is like a man on the other side of the street—you've got to yell at him to stop him. For this class of man your advertisement must be so prominent and talk so fast and so much to the point that it will stop the man who is hurrying through his newspaper."

The margin of profit in a real estate transaction is usually large enough to justify the modest expenditure required for prominent display advertising in a first-class newspaper.

Ironwork in India.
India was the first country which turned iron into weapons. Persia borrowed the art from India. The Rigveda, which is the oldest record in the world, gives evidence of this. So do also the Astras and Sastras of the Dhanurveda, and during the early part of the Christian era the Indian blade was the most used throughout the eastern and western world. This art reached its greatest perfection in northern India, the Punjab, Nepal, Rajputana, Gujarat and other provinces, where they still make beautiful arms.
