ALL ABOUT THE CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE

The Journal Gives its Readers a Splendid Volume with Full Details of the Great Disaster and Fully Illustrated

It is not often that a daily newspaper can secure a premium that has proven as popular as the book we advertise in today's issue. It will repay every one to read every word of the advertisement. The Journal was offered this book by the publishers and accepted their offer without seeing a sample, because previous dealings had proven them to be reliable, and that their books were all that was claimed for them.

The sample copy arrived in due time and it proved to be a much more desirable book than we had anticipated. It is well printed on heavy book paper from new plates, and the half tone illustrations are exceedingly good. The binding is in cloth, of a golden yellow color. In the center of the front cover is a miniature photographic reproduction showing the business section of San Francisco on fire.

This book was written by Opie Read and Chas. Eugene Banks, two well known authors, and the facts related have been very carefully compiled.

Not only does the book, in its 464 pages, tell of the San Francisco disaster, but it also tells the story of the recent devastating eruption of Mount Vesuvius in Italy. It also gives a brief but vivid historical sketch of the great earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and floods of the last 1906 years.

The book is written in the very best literary style and is worthy a place in any library. We cannot speak too highly of it, and are satisfied that any reader of the Journal who receives a copy of it will be more than satisfied.

The book is not for sale by the Journal, but is given to any reader asking for it—on one condition. The condition is this: Pay two dollars in advance, and get the Daily Journal by mail for six months, or by carrier for four months, or the Weekly Journal for two years, and add twenty cents to pay postage, and we will deliver a copy of the book at your nearest post-office, or if on a rural delivery route, the book will be delivered at your door.

The writer has seen several San Francisco earthquake books handled by canvassers, and not one of them is equal in merit either of text or illustration to the splendid book offered by the Journal. And the only cost to you for this book is the 20 cents you pay for postage.

The Journal gives you the book as an acknowledgment of your interest in paying for your subscription to the Journal in advance. You simply pay the postage on the book. If you are now in arrears, it is necessary to pay up, and then pay $2.00 in advance.

Every home in Marion county should have this book.

Without Future Hope.

The matron of a Vermont house of correction is out with the statement that woman, once she is fallen, never reforms, and that while in prison she never manifests the least disposition towards better things, like improving their imprisonment by learning and bettering their conditions for future years. There is a vast difference, says that matron, between the course of men and women who are imprisoned, for the men as a general thing, are anxious to improve their mental condition when serving time. This shows rather a social contrast that most people will not believe without proof, yet it is true in a large majority of cases.

Men may serve a term in prison, may reform and when they come out, engage in some business occupation, and mingle with other men, and gradually live down the taint of the prison, especially if it happens to have been with them the one blot upon an otherwise stainless life. They have something to hope for when they begin life anew. But how different society treats the woman who has been behind the bars. If released women prisoners do return to evil ways the instant they are released and free, are they wholly to blame?

Is not the social code, which refuses them the respect of old friends, an implement of torture to these women? And isn't this code responsible to a great extent for the hopelessness with which they emerge from the prison and view the world?

These rules, of course, have their exceptions, yet the woman once disgraced, has no more than one chance in a hundred to hold the place in the general respect of her former associates, no matter how earnestly she might try to be worthy of such respect. The thought that she is a marked individual influences most women against making the attempt to conduct themselves according to the demands of morality. She knows the encouraging word will not be given and that few things will shape themselves toward helping her in an endeavor, no matter how earnest it may be, towards reformation. She is without hope, and who is responsible for this but the friends of her former station?
