REMEMBRANCE.

There's a village that's gone with our youth, my pet,
 There's a brook and a gray old mill—
 Ah, you will remember them well, my pet,
 The dripping wheel where the sedge was wet,
 Yes, you will remember them well, my pet,
 And the splashing that never was still.

There's a willow tree by the mill dam dear,
 With branches that dip to the stream—
 Ah, you will remember it well, my dear,
 With its shadowy cells and its sounds so queer,
 Yes, you will remember it well, my dear,
 In your musing hour and your dream.

It was there we strolled in the twilight, sweet,
 Along the grass-fringed shore—
 Ah, you will remember it well my sweet,
 The ripple and song of the wave at your feet,
 Yes, you will remember it well my sweet,
 That beautiful song of yore.

But mourn not the scenes that are gone, dear heart,
 Nor the brook nor the mill nor the tree,
 Nor weep for the years that are flown, dear heart,
 Their memory is still of joy a part,
 For I have been left to you, dear heart,
 And you have been left to me.

APPLES FROM AUSTRALIA.

A thousand barrels of apples—roughly equivalent to about 2000 Oregon boxes—recently arrived at New York from Australia by way of Southampton.

Between Australia and England there is a large and increasing trade in many kinds of perishable products, and occasionally shipments find their way to this country.

This being the late autumn in Australia, all the late-keeping autumn fruits are in perfection and can be easily shipped in cold storage to England and there is always vacant cold-storage space in steamers returning from England to this country.

We do not know the rates of freight paid, BUT IT IS NOT PROBABLE THAT THE RATES FROM AUSTRALIA TO NEW YORK ARE AS HIGH AS THE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILROAD RATES FROM THIS COAST, and the time occupied in transit, while longer than the time from this coast under normal condition, can be estimated with much more certainty, and at any rate is no more than winter apples can stand in cold storage without the least injury.

There have, in fact, been a few shipments of Australian plums to New York.

Australia raises good apples, and indeed good fruits of all kinds. The public authorities carefully supervise all exports of perishable commodities and take care that all such commodities which carry the stamp of public inspection SHALL BE HONESTLY PACKED AND IN ALL WAYS FIT FOR MARKET.

But with all these advantages our imports of fruit from Australia are never likely to be of much commercial importance, for the reason that they will not be able to compete in any large way with the domestic seasonable fruit.

There are already in the eastern markets a great abundance of berries, cherries and a few southern peaches.

We shall soon be shipping early fruits and next month, which will be the first month of the Australian winter, eastern markets will be full of all varieties of summer fruits with which no winter fruits can compete for the reason that the public is just through with them and is ready for a change.

There is, of course, a limited market for fine apples of approved varieties at any time of the year.

The importation of Australian apples, therefore, although interesting to think of, can never cut much figure as a feature of commerce.

NATURE STUDENTS.

A learned authority has said that, if the President had devoted himself to nature-study, he would have become a great naturalist.

How some of the politicians wish he had! The President always did love BIG-GAME HUNTING, HOWEVER AND IT IS MUCH MORE SPORT TO BAG A NATIONAL CONVENTION THAN TO TRAP A WHOLE FIELD FULL OF WOLVES.

It is when this nature-student turns aside from his chosen specialty that he makes the fiction-hunters wince.

"T. R." shoots straight at them. They have enlarged upon the natural habits of birds and animals and he tells them so.

It is not so much the accusation that they have diverged from the path of truth that angers these animal-story writers as the insinuation that they didn't know—that they were careless and never tried to find out.

WHICHEVER IT IS, CERTAIN AUTHORS ARE GETTING SOME EXCELLENT ADVERTISING.

When did they err and how? There must be something in their tales, anyhow, when the "overlord" takes notice of them, critically.

The fiction books with fiction animals in them may not be used in the schools, but they will have a wider reading than if they had never been mentioned by the President of the United States; and it may be that some children will be persuaded to discover for themselves wherein they err.

A SERMON ON THE "MASHER."

The People's Press of Portland this week publishes the following timely homily on street flirtations and "mashers":

Now that we have a few extra policemen why not put some of them to work?

For a start, just to break in the official clubs and give the men a chance to be useful, let the chief issue orders against the corner masher THE CIGAR STAND FLIRTER AND THE CHEAP HOODLUM who poses before the cheap theaters, a standing insult to every girl whose eye or ear he can catch.

It is also true that official energy might well be spent on a few of the small females who like this sort of thing and who are to a large extent responsible for the corner masher and the cheap theater bum.

The average bright youth from Albina who spends his nights on the sidewalks imagines that all the world of women are close kin to the feeble minded, gum chewing, tangled haired, flip mouthed, shabby, weak headed, forsaken flirt who claims him as her "feller."

If the official arm would reach out AND GRAB BY THE LEFT EAR A FEW DOZEN OF THESE BRIGHT YOUTHS, AND THE OFFICIAL SPANKING MACHINE WOULD ADMINISTER A FEW SOUND WHACKS to these cute little be-skirted creatures a lot of sensible decent people would find more pleasure in the evening promenade.

Many of this ignorant brazen younger set would be greatly helped by a well administered paddling, none would be injured and while the offense does not merit the rock pile or the cell, it does demand attention.
