THERE MUST BE AUTOMOBILE PROTECTION.

Study the two automobile ordinances before the city council and tell your alderman what you want.

The mayor's ordinance has some good points but is not protective enough for the rest of the people.

The ordinance introduced by the editor of this paper was not drawn up by an attorney and is probably defective in wording.

But it aims to protect people who do not ride in automobiles, and who want protection against them.

The ordinance committee will probably take the best points in both ordinances and report one ordinance.

But they should realize that we have a big city and one life saved is worth more than all the automobiles in the United States.

Again we say look up the two ordinances as printed in Monday's Journal and then tell your alderman what you think about them.

The people should be protected in life and limb against the craze of the age to drive at from twenty to forty miles an hour on the public streets and highways.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE BUTTER TRUST?

Isn't it fine to have a state dairy and food commissioner? The difficulties of dairying are constantly increased.

The business is being more and more monopolized. One large concern is making almost a monopoly of the whole product.

The butter trust now asks forty cents a pound. Substitutes are made illegal.

Cheese at wholesale is up to eighteen cents a pound. The trust will try to screw butter to fifty cents and cheese to twenty-five cents.

Why not? When the state and the national government has to keep an army of inspectors living off the taxpayer, why shouldn't the product be monopolized?

The small dairyman and the little creamery and cheese factory cannot live.

How would it do to have the expense of dairy inspection borne by the products?

The taxpayer has to stand for it now. Why not make the consumer pay the bill?

The stuff could not be much higher. A piece of butter as big as an old-fashioned copper cent is worth more than a cent.

The same weight of butter that is in a silver dollar will cost nearly as much as the uncoined silver after awhile.

WHAT MR. CURTIS DID NOT SEE.

Wm. E. Curtis of the Chicago Record-Herald did not see some things worth printing about this community.

He saw the Indian school, the prune orchards, and the country roads in and out of Salem.

But he probably did not even have his attention called to the fact that here is a city without graft.

The city council the other night passed on $100,000 of bills and contracts in less than two hours.

So far as an ordinary business man can tell there is not a dollar of graft in the whole proceedings.

This community has a public school government devoid of graft and pull and favoritism and run upon merit.

We have a county government that is devoid of graft and not a dollar can be got hold of but for value received.

The city, school district and county government are run on a cash basis and all warrants are at par.

In nearly every instance the office seeks the man, and there is no political machine that has to be fed and places made to keep its votaries out of the poorhouse.

Mr. Curtis could have seen a local community self-governed on the line of higher ideals than are put into practical operation in any other community in the United States.

FUNERAL HONORS TO JULIUS ZUPANSKY

The funeral of the late Julius Zupansky was conducted from the Clough funeral parlors on Court street Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. There were many beautiful floral offerings, and the service was conducted by Rev. P. S. Knight, of the Congregational church. After impressive reading of the scripture and prayer the friends took electric cars for the cemetery, where the rose service was conducted by the same minister. It consists of sprinkling rose leaves on the casket instead of earth, and was closed with rendition of some very appropriate verses written by Rev. Knight. The German Gesang Verein rendered a beautiful song in the German language over their brother, who was one of the charter members. A large number of friends of the deceased attended the services, and paid the last tribute of respect to his memory.

WONDERFUL CHAIR OF OREGON MAPLE

Breeze Gibson has struck a new high water mark by turning out a wonderful chair, that is on exhibition in the show windows of the Buren & Hamilton furniture store. It is of solid curly or burl maple, such as grows only on the Eola hills, and which if the furniture makers could get hold of in the East would be worth almost its weight in gold. Some of the burls entering into the construction of this chair are three feet across, and were cut from trees several hundred years old. Mr. Gibson is a genius for the odd and freaky in the works of nature, and has been three years gathering the material for this chair. Every piece is made of the natural growth and curves, and the rough pointed exterior burls are nature's own handiwork and carving. The large back plate of the chair has a carved margin all around of the natural burl, a wonderful design that surpasses any artificial conception. It needs to be seen to be understood, as no description can do it justice. Some of the polished surfaces seem to have hosts of little angel cherubs flickering over the surface, and the light reflects a pure golden yellow from the highly polished woods. The back of the chair is mounted on a pair of giant elk horns of seven and nine points each, the monster elk having been captured near Mt. Jefferson especially for this chair. The beautiful piece of furniture is worth at least $250, and should grace the Elks lodge, and should really be occupied by the next governor of Oregon, who will undoubtedly be a member of that order. The chair might properly be presented to President Taft, as it is solid and strong enough to hold him. Mr. Gibson has made many beautiful works of art in the maple burls, but this surpasses them all.

FLYING MACHINE KILLS ITS MAHOUT

(United Press Leased Wire.)
 Juvisay, France, Sept. 8.—The first death in the history of French aviation was registered here today, following a fatal accident befalling E. LeFebvre, who recently sprang into fame as one of the leading aeronauts of the country. LeFebvre was testing a Wright machine shortly before nightfall last night, when, or some reason, the machine swooped down under a terrific force generated by the revolving propellers and violently struck the earth. LeFebvre landed head foremost, and died a few minutes afterward without recovering consciousness. Shortly before his fatal flight LeFebvre had tested another Wright machine successfully. The aviator was known as a reckless flyer, and at different times had been fined for recklessness.

MADE A GREAT PLAY

Followers of the Pacific Coast league are still talking about a play, the like of which they never saw, and never expect to see again, unless the same player pulls it off.

Rollo Zeider, the San Francisco shortstop, who goes to the Chicago White Sox for $5500, and a player or two, pulled off the play that has kept San Francisco fans talking for the past week.

The San Francisco Bulletin describes the play. Zeider was on second and Griffin on third, and runs were needed to put the Seals on easy street. The batter threw up the squeeze signal. Griffin caught it, and as soon as the ball left the hand of the pitcher he started for home. The batter missed the ball and it was clear as day that Griffin was a dead one. As soon as he was able he retreated to third, where Zeider was holding forth.

When within a few feet of the bag Griffin turned about and started for the plate again, all the time hoping that some one would execute a wild peg, and that he would score. He hoped in vain, but lo and behold his antics scored Zeider anyhow. But how?

When Griffin came back to third Hogan caught the ball and started after the runner, Griffin set out pell-mell for the plate. It was a hot race between them. All this time Zeider was racing right behind Hogan, but Hogan didn't know this. Hogan overtook Griffin just before he reached the plate and tagged him. Hardly had the ball been put on Griffin when Zeider dashed by Hogan and scored. It was the greatest piece of base running ever seen on a San Francisco diamond. The fans went wild with glee over Zeider's brainy play.—Helena Treasure State.
