

STOLEN MEDFORD PACKAGE CLUE THAT LANDED POSTAL ROBBER IN JAIL

Prisoner Claims to Have Been Book-keeper Who Turned Thief Because He was Broke and Could Get No Work.

Woman Had Knowledge of Crimes Though Not Otherwise Implicated—Breaks Down After Arrest.

The Roseburg Review of Monday gives the following detailed account of the apprehension and arrest of the thief who recently robbed the Medford and other postoffices in the Rogue river valley:

The series of robberies of post-offices, stores and railroad stations in the Rogue river valley, committed within a period of two weeks beginning December 27 last, had its sequence in Roseburg this morning when the man guilty of the crimes was placed under arrest at the Hotel McClallen, where he has been staying with his wife and two little children since last Thursday, under the alias of J. Allison. All of the loot secured in the robberies was found in the man's possession, except such money as he has expended in traveling from place to place with his family.

The thief's arrest was brought about by co-operative detective work on part of P. E. Kelly, special agent of the Southern Pacific company; Postal Inspector S. H. Morse and Chief of Police B. Fenton, of this city. Morse and Fenton took the man into custody in his room at the hotel and lodged him in a cell in the city jail. He made no resistance and frankly confessed to committing the crimes charged against him. He will be formally arraigned before a local magistrate tomorrow and then taken to Portland, where he will be turned over to the federal authorities.

Believed Professional Crook
Morse and Fenton state that Allison is not the man's true name. They say they know his right name, but for certain reasons they do not wish to divulge it at the present time. It is intimated that they suspect the prisoner of being a professional crook who has committed crimes in other states, but they wish to make sure of this before giving his true identity to the public. They have evidence that the man came to Oregon from California a month or so ago. Included in his personal effects are a set of keys used by burglars for picking locks, a chisel, diamond pointed class cutter and pair of files.

His Two Weeks' Record
Beginning December 27 last, the prisoner robbed the following places in the order named:
At Medford—Postoffice; secured $17 in stamp books, six registered packages, carrier's street letter box key and a revolver.
At Talent—Postoffice, S. P. R. R. station and H. L. Burdick's store; secured $6 in stamp books, $6.40 in pennies, nickels and dimes, two express packages and hair brush and comb.
At Grants Pass—A jewelry store; secured large quantity of cutlery, various articles of small jewelry and a revolver.
At Gold Hill—Postoffice, Jennings' saloon and Lance's store; secured $18 in pennies and small change, a marked $2 bill, a revolver, string of rose beads and a chamois skin.
At Rogue River—Postoffice, J. A. Murray's store and railroad station; secured $1.25 in pennies, $4.69 in stamps, $4.25 in nickels and various articles of jewelry.

It was originally reported that during the interim between the robberies at Grants Pass and Gold Hill the postoffice at Eagle Point was looted.

ed. Allison, as the prisoner calls himself, denies any knowledge of that job, and the officers believe him. There is no evidence to connect him with that crime, and there is even doubt if such a crime was committed at all. The officers have little or no knowledge of this reported robbery.

Some Loot Thrown Away
Allison told the local officers that after robbing the jewelry store at Grants Pass he threw away three gold-filled watch cases. These were found near the railroad yards last Saturday. The prisoner also said he discarded a set of surveying instruments which he secured from one of the six registered packages stolen from the Medford postoffice. He gave a fairly good description of the place where he threw the instruments away and Morse will start on a search for them as soon as possible.

Among the stolen articles which the officers found in the prisoner's possession were the following: Five gold watches, three revolvers, three sets of earrings, two pairs of cuff buttons, four stick pins, one brooch, 48 pieces of silver cutlery, one gold-plated drinking cup, one rose bead necklace, one razor, one compass, one fountain pen, one souvenir spoon, one pair jeweler's pliers, one letter carrier's key, two railway switch keys and a lady's woolen knit jacket. With the exception of one revolver, carried on his person, all of this booty was found in suit cases in the room at the hotel occupied by Allison and his family. He also had $8.55 in nickels, dimes and pennies, 51 books of stamps worth $20 and loose stamps amounting to $4.60.

Prisoner Close Mouted
The prisoner is a very slender, anemic looking man, giving his age as 28 years. He is comfortably dressed, wears glasses and has not the appearance of the habitual criminal. He told the newspapermen at the city jail today that he was a bookkeeper by profession and worked recently in Portland. He refused to give the name of the firm he asserted he had been employed by, declared he had no relatives and declined to give any information that might lead to the establishment of his identity.

Allison said he moved to Ashland from Portland last December in search of work, ran short of money and decided to turn burglar to support his family. He denied he ever committed a crime before, but the officers think the burglar outfit found on his person tells a different story. They also have evidence that Allison came to Ashland from California and not from Portland.

The prisoner's wife took her husband's arrest quietly, he as himself did, but afterwards she broke down and gave way to spells of crying. This afternoon she remained in her room and refused to be seen by anyone. She and the two children will be taken to Portland when Allison goes.

Pennies Changed at Bank
The officers have been persistent on the trail of the burglar ever since the robbery of the Medford postoffice on December 27, but the first definite clue was not obtained until after the robbery of the postoffice at Gold Hill, which took place on the night of January 6. On the following day Mrs. Allison cashed $7.75 in pennies at a bank in Grants Pass. That night Allison committed the burglaries at Rogue River, then rode a railroad velocipede to Grants Pass and joined his wife. The next morning—on January 9—the couple bought railway tickets to Roseburg for themselves and two children, a 5-year-old girl and a 2-year-old boy. They arrived here last Thursday afternoon on train No. 29 and took rooms at the Hotel McClallen.

Stolen Jacket Leads to Arrest
Detective Kelly learned of Mrs. Allison's transaction with the pennies at the Grants Pass bank and of her subsequent departure for Roseburg with her husband and children. He immediately communicated with Inspector Morse, who enlisted the aid of Chief of Police Fenton in keeping the suspects under surveillance in this city. Fenton learned at local restaurants where the family were taking their daily meals that Allison always paid the bill in nickels and dimes. On Sunday he made a search of Allison's rooms while the family was absent, and found the woolen knit jacket that was secured from one of the six registered packages stolen from the Medford postoffice.

This jacket was a Christmas present to a Mrs. Estes in Medford from Bloomington, Ill. After Fenton discovered it he notified Morse, who immediately telegraphed to the sender at Bloomington to describe it. This morning he received an answer by telegraph giving a minute description of the garment. Morse and Fenton went at once to Allison's room and placed him under arrest. Then they found secreted a suit case containing all of the other loot, as previously described.

The officers do not believe Mrs. Allison aided her husband in any of the robberies, but they are firmly convinced that she knew what her husband was doing. Allison used no explosive of any kind in his jobs, always effecting entrance to a building by picking the lock of a door and thereafter using a chisel, file or other instruments that best suited his purpose.

Federal Court Case
The postoffice robberies will necessarily put the disposition of Allison's case into the hands of the federal authorities. He will be indicted, Inspector Morse says, on one count for each of the four postal robberies and on a fifth count for stealing the Medford letter carrier's key. The last named offense, Morse says, is alone sufficient to send Allison to the federal penitentiary for a term of ten years.

Discovery in Allison's possession of the two railroad switch keys from Jacksonville was a big surprise to the officers. They knew that the keys had been stolen, but they did not suspect that their quarry had been operating in that locality.

The apprehension of Allison means the distribution of several hundred dollars reward among the officers responsible for the capture. The government has a standing reward ranging from $50 to $200 for the arrest of any postoffice robber, and a reward is paid for each offense no matter if the same man is guilty of more than one offense.

Originally the officers thought that two men were involved in the series of robberies, but Allison declares he committed all of them single handed.

WOLGAST OFFERED $10,000 FOR BATTLE

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 14.—Ad Wolgast, former light-weight champion boxer, who accompanied by Mrs. Wolgast, is in Portland today, stated that since arriving in the north he had received an offer of a $10,000 guarantee for a 20-round fight with Freddie Welsh, to take place in England. Wolgast referred the offer to Tom Jones, his manager, in Chicago.

Wolgast declares he has little hopes of ever again getting Willie Ritchie, who succeeded to his crown, into the ring with him. He named six fighters, any one of whom he said he would back for $5,000, who, he declared, could defeat the new champion. They are Joe Mandot, Joe Rivers, Freddie Welsh, Jack Britton, Leach Cross and Teddy Maloney of Philadelphia.

Wolgast will leave in a few days for Cadillac, Mich.
