SNEAK THIEF TOOK MEDFORD BOOKLET SPURNING OTHERS

The following is an extract from a letter received by J. A. Westerlund from George T. Sturtevant, of the Bureau of Lands, Manila, P. I., who is interested financially in a tract in the Westerlund orchards: 'I thank you very much for the photo prints, which seem to indicate that everything is in good shape on my ten acres. I should like very much indeed to have some more pictures in the spring, showing the trees in blossom, if you can spare enough time to send someone out. 'The new Medford booklet was received with much pleasure. I had in my desk quite a collection of these from Corvallis, Albany, Salem, Medford, etc., and about two months ago some discriminating petty thief went through my desk, looked things over, and decided that he would take the Medford booklet along with a few other spoils. This I presume may be construed as indicating that the beauties of the Rogue river valley exceed all others to the heathen eye. 'I am already tired of the Philippines, and am looking forward to the days that I am to spend in the Rogue river valley. I have travelled quite a good deal, and can throw in my voice with the rest of the enthusiasts, and proclaim that it is one of the garden spots of the world. The memory of the clear bracing October mornings makes the heat here even more intolerable. 'I congratulate you upon your reelection, and hope you will not let the state forget the existence of those way down in Southern Oregon. I hope the Monitor orchards may leap to the front this year.'

GROUND HOG SAW HIS SHADOW

The ground hog saw his shadow, but it is hinted that all signs fail—indeed, with as perfect a day prevailing as today, it is hard to believe that six weeks of winter is yet to prevail. Sunday the fog and clouds rolled away and unless the ground hog came early from his burrow he certainly saw his shadow. If the groundhog gets a glimpse of his shadow, says the legend, when he slips out of his hole on "groundhog day" to take a look at the weather, back he goes and stays hidden for six weeks more, and spring is delayed just that long in coming. But in spite of legends and prophecies, the throng of people that was on the streets Sunday enjoying the sunshine seemed to think that one such perfect day this early is amply worth the danger of six weeks of winter.

CLEARING UP AT BEAR CREEK BRIDGE

Contractor Perham has completed the Bear creek bridge with the exception of removing forms and getting his material and equipment out of the way, which will be accomplished in the near future. Then the city will take a hand in completing the approaches and the bridge will be open for traffic. Mr. Perham made rapid progress
