There is a feeling in the minds of some that the telephone service in this city is somewhat costly. The fact that some subscribers have stopped makes it of less value, on the principle that the fewer that take it the less advantage it is to have it in one's office or place of business.

THE SIGNAL SERVICE.

An Important Extension of the Service at Astoria.

Mr. J. N. Griffin, in charge of the government meteorological station in this city, states that the extension of the service on this coast has resulted in the establishment of an additional office at Astoria, the result of its daily observations being of prime importance to the commerce of the Columbia. Wherever throughout the United States "Old Probabilities" has established a branch office the resultant benefit to commerce and agriculture has amply justified the outlay.

On the coast line of the Union commerce demands an efficient signal service; it realizes the value of a weather bureau, and any means increasing the efficiency of that department of public service is of benefit. The building a telegraph line from Astoria to Cape Hancock and the establishing there a signal station was of great benefit to the commerce of the northwest coast, and the further establishing of an office in this city where daily weather reports will be sent from and received will be of proportionate value.

It has only been by the most persistent and long continued effort that an appropriation has been obtained for the establishment of this branch of the signal service on this coast. The offices already established are San Francisco, Astoria and Cape Hancock, and the service will, no doubt, be extended as rapidly as circumstances will permit.

An ingenious code of signals is devised for coast stations, which affords means of instant communication between vessels and the shore. By day arrangement of flags lettered from H to W, give such signals as "Want immediate assistance," "We are coming," "Do not attempt to land," "DANGER: Rudder, cannot steer," "Engine disabled," "You are standing into danger," "Heavy weather coming; look sharp," "Bar impossible," "Cast off till such water," "An on fire," "An on sinking," "Want assistance," "Want a steam tug," etc., etc.

Cautionary signals are also to be displayed: A square red flag with a square black center by day, and a red light by night gives warning of an approaching storm. A cautionary off shore signal is a white flag with a black square in the center shown above a red flag with a black square in the center by day, or a white light shown above a red light by night, is "cautionary with winds expected to blow from a northern or western direction, or off shore, at or near the place at which the signal may be."

"GYMNASTRY."

"What! you fit my dress by measuring my neck?" said an Atlanta lady of fashion to her dressmaker. "That is all I want," was the reply. "Dear me," said the lady, "how strange." "Gymnastetry is the name of the science," said the lady with the measure. "The system of measuring the female figure was discovered by me after years of patient study and hard work. Professors Bartlett and Battie gave the new science the name of "gymnastetry," which is made up of the Greek words that mean female measurement. The rules, however, which apply to the female figure apply with equal and absolute force to the male figure."

THE NEW CASABIANCA.

The girl stood on the roller skates. But then she could not go. She was afraid to tempt the fates. Because she walked so. She called aloud, "Say, Chawley, say! Do come: help me along!" But Chawley went the other way.

AN ENGLISH REVERSE.

Khartoum Captured; Gordon Missing; Col. Stewart Assassinated.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The war office has issued the following: "Telegrams from Wolsely announce that the fall of Khartoum took place on January 26. He says that Colonel Wilson arrived at Khartoum January 28, and was greatly surprised to find that the enemy were in possession of that place. He immediately started on his return down the river, and proceeded under a heavy fire from the rebels. When some miles below the Shubbla cataract Colonel Wilson's steamers were wrecked, but he and his whole party managed to reach an island safely, where they are secure. A steamer has gone to bring them back to the British camp near Metemneh. Wolsely says he has no information regarding the fate of Gordon, and does not know whether he is dead or alive."

There is no longer any doubt that El Mahdi holds possession of Khartoum. The excitement in London and everywhere throughout the British isles, where the news is known is rising to fever heat. Most people take a gloomy view of the position of the British troops in the Sudan. The jubilant gladness which has characterized England in regard to Stewart's successful arrival in the neighborhood of Metemneh was received is now changed to dread.

The war office is besieged with army officers, tendering their services for active duty in the Sudan. The capture of Khartoum has created grave fears, especially in army circles, for the safety of General Stewart and his army. A number of military officers of repute, even expressed the opinion that unless reinforcements are hurried forward to North the fall of Khartoum may lead to disaster to the forces under Wolsely and General Earle. A cabinet council has been summoned to meet at once.

Admission is feared disturbed by the news, and some people say he will soon resign. The object of the Stewart of Khartoum has created grave apprehension in regard to the whole Egyptian problem among members of the cabinet. Gladstone and Earl Granville started for London as soon as the news reached them. A cabinet council will be held this evening.

The first news of the fall of Khartoum was brought by a messenger, who left the island where Colonel Wilson was stranded, and came on foot to Gubat, news of Khartoum's fall not being then known in the desert. Intelligence of the disaster, however, has since spread far and wide, and some of the best of our countrymen, as well as the ship for England have declared for El Mahdi.

Natives report that El Mahdi has 60,000 men in the vicinity of Khartoum, and he introduced a number of iron guns from London. These cartridges were mingled freely with native troops under Gordon, and by bribes, threats and working on their religious feelings, induced them to mutiny. Seven thousand of the garrison deserted to the enemy, leaving Gordon only 2,500 faithful soldiers. With this small force he attempted to hold the city against El Mahdi's great army, but after severe fighting, in which large numbers of rebels were killed, he was compelled to surrender.

When Sir Charles Wilson reached Khartoum he found that El Mahdi's forces occupied both the town and the citadel. He tried to land and ascertain the fate of Gordon, but the expedition was abortive. The enemy's guns were turned upon him in full force, and he was therefore compelled to turn his back upon the fallen city and return to Gubat without finding out whether Gordon is dead or alive.

The steamer of Colonel Stewart's steamer reports he left Khartoum on the steamer Abbas with Stewart, two European consuls, Hassam Bey, twelve Greeks and several natives. Two other steamers accompanied the party. The whole party had landed on the island, but when they reached the island, the natives who formed two parties armed with swords and spears. One party entered the house and killed Stewart and the two consuls. Hassam Bey escaped wounded and was afterwards taken to Berber. The second party attacked the rest of Stewart's people, among whom was the narrator of this story, who swam to an island and hid until dark. He was afterwards taken a prisoner to Berber. Stewart had landed stores and provisions from the steamer, which had made for trips to the island. Many of his party were drowned in trying to escape. The bodies of Stewart and others were thrown into the river. Suleiman's followers divided all the money they could find and sent other spoils in boats to Berber.

The British vessels, Saraca and Wm. D. Seal and the American ship C. S. Hubber, lying at Astoria ready for sea, were all in the custody of the U. S. Marshal, were released yesterday by telegraph, the requisite bonds having been filed by agents here.—Oregonian, 6.

WHAT THEY SAY.

The Voice of the State Press on Current Topics.

What has become of the committee appointed by the legislature to investigate the swamp land business; will some one rise and explain?—Tribune.

The man whose has the most to say about ring combinations, if closely watched, will be found, as a rule, laboring to form one by which his own insignificant places him in the foreground.—Standard.

While every one is denouncing the Irish dynamite, it is well not to forget that England is reaping in their acts from a sowing she made centuries ago and has carefully cultivated ever since.—Oregonian.

While many state legislatures are wrestling with the freight problem, it must not be forgotten that the railroads have made many concessions. The farmers too frequently overlook this fact and assail the railroads with a vindictive force that is not reasonable.—News.

The government ought not to part with its land, except to actual homestead settlers. If a man wants a home, give it to him free of all costs at the end of his five years residence. But sell no more land, and thus shut their doors against all lands and further land monopoly.—Viellet.

The members from the interior seem to have a pretty clear idea of the importance of heeding the just claim of the country to representation in the senate. They also understand clearly that as a measure of party success the election of a man from the interior would be greatly advantageous to the Republicans.—Statesman.

If the grangers really want an anti-monopoly man for senator, and one they can rely on, why don't they hunt up a man who has had the courage and backbone to stand up for the cause when it was unpopular to do so? Any man will join a cause after it has been made popular. That is the trick of the demagogue every time.—Sunset, Welcome.

The state had in its swamp and other lands a valuable property. But that property has mostly been squandered. When Governor Grover "organized the offices" he and his associates devised a scheme to dispose of the swamp lands of the state. It has been carried out, and so successfully that the state neither has the lands nor anything to show for them, except a lot of warrants, amounting to a very large sum, drawn on the swamp land fund, which there is no money to pay.—Oregonian.

Geo. F. Caples is a slick-tongued, oily stump speaker, and can do more to make his Sunday school laugh, or "bring down the house" at a ward meeting than any man in Oregon. He is also a jolly, wholesome, good fellow, and has a little meanness in the way of greed, selfishness or avarice, as any man that Portland ever elected to public office. According to Cronin's account, when St. Peter shut the gates of heaven against Joe Knapp, because he was a lawyer, Caples went in without a question—because he was not lawyer enough to hurt anything. The heart and sympathies of Caples are undoubtedly with and for the common people, the toiling masses, and in our estimation this should cover a multitude of sins.—Viellet.

Among the candidates now before the legislature for senator is a gentleman who for five years was a judge of the circuit court in Leura and also a presidential elector in that state—who was for five years chief justice of Oregon—member of the constitutional convention to form the constitution of this state—senator in congress for six years—member of the joint commission to settle the Alabama claims, and for nearly four years attorney general of the United States. His abilities as a lawyer, legislator and speaker are universally admitted. He is well known favorably known among the public men of the country, and his fidelity and service to the Republican party are unquestionable. He has been for more than thirty years a citizen of Oregon.—Tale.

The Telephone.

Jeff's new saloon, the "Telephone," is now open. It is new all through; the building is new, the furniture and fittings are new and of elegant finish and the proprietor has put in some of the best of the latest music, that interested the patrons of the Telephone. Everything about the place is first class, the wines and liquors of the best, and Jeff will exert himself to make it pleasant for an entire who calls. He has put up and finely furnished a first class establishment and no cozier place can be found in the city in which to meet a friend or join in a social glass.

Success.

The sale of Syrup of Figs is simply immense. Everyone is taking it, and all admit that it is the best medicine ever used. Children cry for it on account of its pleasant taste, and grown people who have used it once never take any thing else. Unlike other remedies for biliousness and constipation it never loses its power to act, and it always leaves the organs on which it acts stronger than before. Besides, one feels more bright and cheerful after using it than after using any other medicine. It is Nature's own true laxative. W. E. Dement & Co. are agents for Astoria, Oregon.

All the patent medicines advertised in this paper, together with the choicest perfumery, and toilet articles, etc., can be bought at the lowest prices at J. W. Conn's drug store, opposite Occident hotel, Astoria.
