"LIBERTY" AND RAILROADS.

COMMENTING ON certain efforts of eastern railroad managers to arrange matters to suit themselves, the New York Tribune says:

Messrs. Huntington, Porter and a number of other railroad kings who were announced as promoters of the Railway Shareholders' association, which has just been organized for the dissemination of news to stockholders and for the protection of their interests, have hastened to deny, in the most vigorous manner, that they had anything to do with the project. The denial was hardly necessary. These gentlemen have made their immense fortunes under a system which denies information to stockholders and allows them the protection which the under dog usually gets from the upper. The proposed association, if carried out, would clip their wings of some of their most precious feathers. Who ever heard of kings leading in movements to end down their prerogatives? American roads which make pooling and all other kinds of agreements with each other as to connections, methods of business and rates, have a freedom entirely unknown to corporations in Great Britain.

The latest report of the English Railway Commission, which has just been printed in England, gives an idea of the restrictions thrown about the roads there in making their working agreements with each other. No such agreement, it appears, is valid until it has been advertised in accordance with certain forms, so that both the stockholders and the public may know just what the agreement amounts to and may make such objections as they desire to the commissioners, who, strange to say, listen to them. As though this was not sufficiently socialistic, it is provided by the law of England that these arrangements shall be revised every ten years, and, if necessary, shall be modified to conform to the public interest. America is popularly considered to be a freer country than England, and so it evidently is from the point of view of the Vanderbilts and Goulds and Huntingtons, who run our railroads as they choose, but after all, if liberty is not license to do as you choose, but protection from the license of others to do as they choose, it really seems possible that there may be more liberty in England for customers of railroads and minority stockholders than in this country.

A GHAZLY VOYAGE.

CAPTAIN BAINE, of the Wm. H. Bess, recently arrived in Boston, says his bark was directly in the vicinity of Anjiers at the time of the terrible disaster, which killed thousands, and changed the face of the land around Sunda Straits. He left Batavia August 16th, and the following morning at daylight those on deck noticed a heavy bank of clouds rising from the west and obscuring the sun, and at the same time the barometer dropped down to 29.40, and again suddenly rose to 29.70. All hands were called and sail taken off as fast as possible, heavy showers of sand and ashes commenced falling, completely covering decks and spars to a depth of several inches. By noon it had grown darker than the darkest night and commenced to blow a hurricane, but, strange to say, the sea remained perfectly smooth. Heavy rumblings, like distant thunder, were constantly heard at intervals. The sky was lighted up by lightning flashes, and a strong smell of sulphur permeated the atmosphere and made it difficult to breathe. All hands were affected by this awful scene, and many of the sailors thought the world was coming to an end.

Throughout the gale the tide set strongly to the westward, and the bark drove through the water at the rate of fourteen knots an hour. At 3 p. m. the sky commenced to grow brighter, but ashes continued to fall like snow. On the following day the bark entered the straits of Sunda, and the extent of the damage done was plainly to be seen. Whole islands had sunk, and those that remained had changed in form. The north-western part of Krakatin Island had disappeared, and Verelatin and Long Island, heretofore covered with trees, were completely bare. They saw a very large number of bodies, and the water for miles was covered with trees and dead bodies. The sea for 600 miles was a field of lava. They experienced a hurricane from the north and northeast with a tremendous sea, which lasted for three days. During this time the decks and cabin were flooded with water, and a portion of the bulwarks and everything moveable on the deck was washed away. The most fearful thing of all was the sea of corpses; "for nearly three days we came across body after body of persons who had lost their lives in the earthquake." One man alone counted sixty in plain sight, and thousands must have perished.

The petition to congress concerning the forfeiture of the Astoria land grant is receiving numerous signatures through the Willamette valley, and as far east as Wasco county.

THE wonders of the Yellowstone region are said to be rivaled if not excelled by the recent discoveries of Prof. Pumpelly's surveying party in northern Montana. The region explored is around the Upper Marina Pass, west of the Rocky Mountain range, and about 150 miles north of Missoula. Aside from the mountain scenery, there are three great natural amphitheatres, in one of which Prof. Pumpelly counted twenty-two cascades over 500 feet in height, while on a neighboring mountain is a true glacier, having a frontage of at least a mile, and in some places a fall estimated at 500 feet in height. The Northern Pacific road runs near enough to these new wonders to make them easily accessible to the curious.

SIR WILFRID LAWSON, the English radical statesman, does not know why people should quarrel over politics or religion. He would as soon think of quarreling with a person having the rheumatism. "A man has the rheumatism because it is a disease of his body, and a Tory is a Tory because he is not strong enough to resist the attacks of error." "Mr. Gladstone once said that the duty of a government is to make it easy for men to do right and difficult for them to do wrong, and the duty of the people in relation to the government is to make it easy for the government to do right and difficult for it to do wrong."

DIED.
In Eugene, Oregon, Tuesday, Dec. 4, 1883, Mrs. Emma Goodell, aged 85 years. The deceased was a pioneer of this state, having resided in Yamhill county since 1851. She was the grandmother of Mrs. W. W. Parker, of this city, and had many friends in Clatsop county.

To the Citizens of Astoria. I HEREBY ANNOUNCE MYSELF AS A CANDIDATE for the office of Mayor of this City at the ensuing City election.

A CARD.

TO ASTORIANS: In order that everyone may know the facts in the case with regard to numerous reports now in circulation, I deem it but justice to myself as a candidate for mayor of Astoria, to say, that I have never directly nor indirectly, nor in any way, pledged myself or made any promises to any man or number of men concerning nominations for city offices, nor concerning any official act, should I be elected, and in that event would be, as I am now, entirely unpledged.

NOTICE

To Cannermen and Fishermen. J. P. LEATHERS, formerly sewer and sail taken off as fast as possible, heavy showers of sand and ashes commenced falling, completely covering decks and spars to a depth of several inches.
