

TALES OF BRAVERY BY ALLIES WILL BE PRECIOUS HERITAGE

Wounded Private Tells of Queen's Bays' Daring in Meeting German Attack. Engineers Sacrificed at Bridge.

By A. J. ROBBE

HAVE, France, Sept. 17.—It is probable that the details of the wonderful and daring endurance of the troops of the allied forces in the present campaign will never be properly written, but they will remain in the hearts of the French and will be handed down from father to son in the villages and towns around which our men are battling for the freedom of Europe.

Most of the regiments will be able to embody into their colors the names of many historic fights, but hardly any will be able to hand down such stories as the Second Dragon Guards and the Queen's Bays will transmit to their future regiments.

Here is the story that was told to me by Private Bryant as he lay wounded in the hospital ship:

"I don't just remember the date. We were not here to think of dates lately. But it was just over a week ago. We were somewhere in the neighborhood of St. Quentin. We had been fighting all day, and we were tired. Our guns were very hot and they were very heavy. We had been fighting for some time and we were very hot. We had been fighting for some time and we were very hot.

"The morning, however, the Colonel gave orders to saddle. We jumped on our horses, and at the same moment shells began to burst overhead. Our horses stampeded. The enemy's sharpshooters were already in position and were snatching our horses and snatching our horses and snatching our horses and snatching our horses.

"The German artillery fire increased in intensity. We began to wait anxiously for our own Royal Field Artillery to get into position. It was delayed by the fact that the battery horses were being watered.

"Nothing had to be done, so we got the Maxims up, despite the withering fire. Our boys soon got busy. It would have done you good to see how calmly and quickly they went about their work.

"Our men realized the meaning of their job. It was to hold on until the artillery came up. In other words, it was to wait for the attack from the Germans. Within a few minutes they were sending some 300 shots in so many seconds among the Germans.

"Then the artillery arrived. We had four guns against 11 for the Germans, but some of those 11 were silenced. "It was not long before the Bays were being charged. Almost before they expected it the bugle sounded and they were off, 'hell for leather,' at the enemy's guns.

"The result of that little scrap was the capture of 11 Krupp guns and many prisoners. Unfortunately, Bryant was left wounded on the field and was made a prisoner of the Germans. He lived for five days on bread and water, all that the Germans would supply him. On the fifth day a detachment of French cavalry arrived, rescued the prisoners and captured the German troops who were guarding them.

"The Britishers were taken to Peronne, where they were cared for by the French."

BRITISH BATTERY WIPED OUT.

Bryant told me that in the action of St. Quentin an entire British battery engaged but 17 men were left alive.

ROMANCE, TRAGEDY AND COMEDY IN THE THEATRE OF WAR

The French papers are recalling an interesting reply which General Pau made a year ago, when his admirers proposed to present him a sword of honor upon the occasion of his giving up command of the 20th Army Corps.

"I certainly should not accept the sword of honor and other well-meaning patriotic things of this kind," he said. "Such a recompense must be reserved for the man who shall lead our victorious armies beyond Metz and Strasbourg, beyond the Rhine, into the very heart of the German Empire. As for me, modest worker in times of peace, enemy to publicity and popularity, it is sufficient that I have the confidence of those who have served under my orders, and the suffrages of good people such as you."

At the village of Louches, in northern France, a wounded French sergeant, captured by German brutality, shot a Prussian officer. Before being shot he was given water by a dauntless lad, little Despres, who thereupon was also condemned to immediate execution. Just as the soldiers were bandaging the boy's eyes he suddenly turned on his captives, with a cruel smile, cried cynically: "I give you life on condition that you act as executioner of this sergeant. He is mine and yours, you'll give him. After a moment's hesitation the boy agreed, to the horror of his comrades. Seizing a rifle, he aimed at the sergeant's head and fired. The Prussian was killed.

La Presse publishes an interview with the private soldier Tureot, who with his comrade, Broussard, captured the first German flag. He is now in the hospital at Mortaigne, slightly wounded. Tureot tells a very modest story. He says he lost his regiment wandering in a wood, when he saw a wounded German standard bearer trying to hide his flag. Calling a comrade, Tureot attacked the German, and seized the flag. Then came the hardest part, the withdrawal carrying the trophy amidst a storm of bullets. His knapsack was pierced ten times and his rifle broken in his hands.

A correspondent writes that between Chateau de Coateau and Lobbes, a particularly desolated neighborhood, from whence the inhabitants had fled, the Germans found a hungry canary in an abandoned farmhouse. Without having experienced the German's words, kindness and tenderness of the German soldiers, one would have called their feeding of the canary an affection, or at best a passing whim, but it was typical.

A story has reached Paris of the courageous action of Mme. Macherez, of Soissons. When the Germans arrived there she was absent. None of the officials responded to the call, whereupon Mme. Macherez went to the Germans and said: "There is no Mayor here, but I answer for every one and everything—you will have to do if deprivations are committed."

After disputing the requisitions and the conditions of the Germans, the courageous woman saved Soissons on easy terms.

Alan Bott, writing to the London Chronicle from Bordeaux, says: "French athletes have been distinguishing themselves on the fighting line. Two days ago a notice appeared in the official gazette that a corporal named Georges Andre had been promoted to sergeant before members of his regiment and recommended for a military medal. The paper suggested that this might refer to Georges Andre, to whom the French Premier recently alluded as an all-around athlete and the best Rugby three-quarter, and who was second in the London Olympic games. From the notice it is learned that this is indeed the case, and following is the story of how Andre, who is with the French army in Lorraine, won his honors."

"With six men he went into a village to find rooms for the officers. In the market place was a large band of Germans, who immediately set upon the small detachment."

FALL OF LIEGE FORTS BLAMED ON GRAFT AMONG BUILDERS

Belgian Government Investigates Alleged Misuse of Funds and Use of Inferior Materials.

ANTWERP, Sept. 17. Graft, and not the bravery of the Germans nor the power of their siege guns, was responsible for the quick fall of the forts at Namur. And this also, it is stated, was responsible for the collapse of the defense at Liege, notwithstanding the fact that the Liege works held out longer than those at Namur.
