Good Advice.

BISHOP GEORGE AND THE YOUNG PREACHER.

An aged traveller, worn and weary, was gently urging on his tired steed, just as the sun was dropping behind the range of hills...

"I don't know," said she coldly, after scrutinizing for some time the appearance of the traveller, which was not the most promising...

The young circuit preacher soon made his appearance, and consequently swaggering up to the old man, examined him for some moments inquisitively...

The traveller, aged and weary as he was, dismounted and led his faithful animal to the stable, and with his own hands he rubbed him down, and gave him food...

The young minister played his part well with all the frivolity of a city beau, and nothing like religion escaped his lips. Now he was chatting and bandying senseless compliments to this young lady...

Towards eleven o'clock the minister came up stairs, and without pause or prayer, hastily threw off his clothes, and got into the very middle of the small bed...

Love not—what is there here to love! The fairest rose has got its thorn, Its leaves will wither fade away...

Love not—the world's its giddy throng, Is here—now there—then far away! Its pleasures all will be by one Pass from our view like a summer day.

A little that a righteous man hath, is better than the riches of many wicked.

We invite the attention of our readers to the following extract of an address of Mr. Skinner, the editor of the "Plough, the Loom and the Anvil" delivered before the Bucks County Agricultural Society on the 2d of October last.

Land, at the distance of a few miles from New York, in West Chester county, is selling at several hundred dollars an acre, because the railroad has diminished the expenditure between the consumer and the producer...

An English writer says that between Croydon and London his attention was continually attracted by the high order and beautiful appearance of the market gardens through which the railway runs.

The same writer relates the following anecdote: "An agriculturist and large landowner in passing through these grounds expressed aloud, in the railway carriage, his admiration of the fine order and beautiful appearance of the crops, and his surprise at the entire absence of weeds."
