When I Tuck in Beauty's Sleeves.
I, who am of a fashion, At the mare's neck in a mood, Have inveigled in prose and verse, too, Your poet's palinode; And pecked from out of the Fourth daughter, eye "Dearest"!

A DUTIFUL GIRL.
It was romantic, but impossible. She was the fifth daughter of Dr. Pillsburgh, of Curzon street, Mayfair, and the third son of the Earl of Broadmoor, with an allowance that kept him in bed and a smoking, together with a bedroom and the run of his body, at the family mansion in Grosvenor square.

His Majesty was Willing to Please.
His satanic majesty sat upon his throne, fanning the nuggy air with his flamboyant tail.

Love Versus Ambition.
Jack Dallas never was considered a handsome man, as handsome men go, but everybody, old and young, liked his bright blue eyes and sunny smile.

The Great West.
When we think of the teeming population which now fills many portions of our country west of the Rocky Mountains, and remember how famous, all over the world, is their singular beauty, and their incomparable value to the tourist, the health seeker, the agriculturist and the highlander, as well as the miner, it is interesting to read what an intelligent statesman as Daniel Webster thought of them just fifty years ago.

Grise as a Disease.
A medical authority says that grise is a disease and must be treated as such. It cannot be ignored, neither can it be controlled. It must be accepted, and allowed to wear itself out.

Edwin Forrest's Indian Auditors.

From the Washington Post. "That picture reminds me of one of the most thrilling incidents of my life," said a venerable white-haired gentleman, Mr. R. B. Sims, of South Carolina, pointing to the magnificent and much admired portrait of Edwin Forrest that adorns the walls of the Hotel Page. "It certainly is a splendid likeness of the great actor, and carries me back to a regular, memorable occasion many years before the civil war, when he was acting an engagement at Charleston, playing nightly to large and enthusiastic audiences. I was a new lad, and was with delight when the night came that I could go to hear him."

"In the audience was the celebrated Indian child, Oso, and half a dozen of his braves, who were then captives. They had been pining in confinement, and, prompted by the humane motive of affording them some diversion, the authorities took them to hear Forrest play. His grand looks and majestic figure caught the couple's admiring eyes, and they appeared entranced from the very outset. Forrest soon observed the strange group and immediately formed a design to interest them particularly, for suddenly, in the midst of a stirring scene, he emitted an Indian war whoop. It frightened the Indians' imaginations, and the effect on Oso and his party was magical. Jumping to their feet instantaneously they gave back an answering whoop that rent the air with its mighty roar, and fairly chilled the blood of many a nervous hearer. Two or three ladies fainted."

"The whole thing was so sudden, so strange and startling, that it made a vital and lasting impression on every soul in that assemblage. Forrest was frequently heard to recall the episode, and he was wont to declare that the action of those untutored warriors was the greatest compliment ever paid to his powers as an actor."

Mind and Matter.

Dr. Heinrich Hensoldt. One of the greatest triumphs of the human mind, and beyond comparison the most important step hitherto taken toward the solution of the world's enigmas, was the discovery that an object might be seen, that any given object, for instance a tree, can not by any possible stretch of imagination be said to exist, unless there be at the same time an eye to see or a hand to touch it—in other words, a mind to conceive it. In extension of this discovery it easily follows that the entire "external world" can have no independent existence, viz., can not be real, except as a mental phenomenon, and that if mind should ever be destroyed or cease to exist, the world, as a matter of course, would cease to exist also.

This discovery was made thousands of years ago by subtle reasoners in far-off Hindostan, and its deductions are fully borne out by the monuments in the Pyramids, which are philosophical treatises appended to the Vedas, a treasure house of wisdom which has no equal, and in comparison with which the logic of our foremost modern luminaries seems like the veriest child's play. In those glorious treasures we have an epitome of the wisdom of ages which pondered over life's riddle long before the first pyramid was built, long before Abraham rained the plagues of Chaldea with his cattle, a treacherous and savage Bedlam. And, like a golden thread running through the Pyramids, is the ever-recurring lesson: "Matter is an illusion; mind alone is real!"

Clarence is an acute and observing little fellow.

He is full of curiosity and is continually asking the why and wherefore of all he sees and hears. His inquisitiveness is "What for?" and he will repeat until he receives an answer that appeals to his sense or imagination. He has frequently seen his father decapitate a chicken, and to "kill" to him meant the same as "to chop the head off."

Recently he came to see us, his mother's trunk was being packed, and the following dialogue ensued: "Big box? What for?" "To pack in my clothing and books." "What for?" "To take it away to a big city." "What for?" "So that I can use the things in it." "What for?" "To buy a pair of shoes." "What for?" "To buy a hat." "What for?" "To buy a pair of boots." "What for?" "To buy a pair of gloves." "What for?" "To buy a pair of socks." "What for?" "To buy a pair of shoes." "What for?" "To buy a pair of boots." "What for?" "To buy a pair of gloves." "What for?" "To buy a pair of socks."

A piece of Berlin Gobelin tapestry of the seventeenth century kept in the Metropolitan Museum has just been repaired and hung in the Royal Palace. It represents the Great Elector at the siege of Stettin, is 15 feet by 12 and is valued at $75,000. The north-eastern pieces were replaced by new ones, and the tarnished silver by new, in the Berlin factory.

A plant in Germany has been worked successfully with electricity and in this country an electric weed killer has been tested which kills the weeds, the current being generated on the spot, passing out through a brush and from thence is brought in contact with the weeds. The current is completed through the weeds to the coils of the ground.
