

FOR THE FARMER.

Grooming Horses.

The modern rules for feeding and grooming horses, in the Russian cavalry, are:—Rise at four; groom one hour with curry-comb, brush and rubbing cloth. Give four quarts of water; then give two quarts of oats; at seven, water; at twelve give one gallon of water, two quarts of oats, and five lbs. of hay; at six P. M., give water, and five pounds of hay, groom one hour, then give two quarts of oats, and wash the legs in cold water, and rub till dry. Then unite the halter, unfasten it, and tie to a certain length, in a hard slip knot, with two half hitches.

A failure to perform all this, in the most faithful manner, subjects the groom to severe punishment. The horses are on parade from eight to ten A. M., and from two to four, P. M. This treatment and exercise, with six quarts of oats, and fifteen pounds of hay per diem, is sufficient to keep a horse in the best condition the year round; while many of our farmers feed more than double that quantity of oats, and the same amount of hay in seven months. Now, the difference is undoubtedly our want of system. Precise regularity in the time and quantity of feed has much to do with the appetite, and and power of digestion. The stomach of the horse will contract or expand with the quantity it receives. If it has not power to digest all the surplus, it must be disgorged, either by way of the piboric or cardiac. In horses, this surplus keeps up an expansion of the bowels, and much of the excrement is undigested nutrition.—A hungry horse eats ravenously, swallowing much without sufficient mastication. Here is another loss. The size of the bowels should correspond with the size of the stomach. The disposition and power of the bowels to reject or retain their charge, should correspond with the power of digestion and ejection of the stomach. The horse, with proper exercise, will discharge each meal at three different times, while some other animals discharge three meals at one time. This rule varies in animals of the same class, and explains the reason why some large men and horses are small eaters, and small ones are large eaters.—This may be controlled, to some extent, by taking or giving precise quantities of food, at regular intervals, and regulating the exercise.

The warm blooded animal has an active discharging surface, or skin, while the cool-blooded possesses no discharging pores; hence the necessity and utility of grooming; the higher and warmer the blood, the more liable to fever, congestion and stagnation; and much depends on the condition of the surface, to keep up an active circulation, as well as to mature and pass off the exhausted animal material. Dandruff is exhausted animal matter, which accumulates on the unhealthy surface, which is passed off in a solid, in place of a fluid condition.—Ohio Farmer.

Agricultural Hints.

A contemporary suggests that old bones should be placed in the heap of stable manure, and the heating, sweat g process will soften them, so that they can easily be broken up, and all the animal matter and gases retained. By placing them in the Fall where the manure heap is to be made, and keeping them covered by the accumulating heap during Winter, they will add much to the value of the manure.

M. de Morogues announces that tansy dried—is excellent sheep feed, and that, when fresh, it makes capital litter for domestic animals. Its peculiar balsamic odor most effectually drives away flies.—A lap-dog sleeping on a bed of fresh tansy is immediately freed from these vermin. It should be renewed when the leaves are quite dry.

The Michigan Farmer well observes: "A plow-horse should have all things be a good walker. The walking gait is not cultivated enough in training horses.—Only consider what a team that could walk four miles an hour, for ten hours per day could do towards hurrying forward Spring work."

Draw the brush pruned from your orchard off from the grass land and pile it. Do not get the reputation of being "shifless" by this neglect. Nothing looks worse, even in a "hog pasture," than scattering brush.

A large iron kettle, such as is used for boiling potash, furnishes a convenient and lasting watering-trough for stock, and is cheaper in the end than any which can be made of wood, however strongly constructed.

What a Horse Can Endure.

Some curious experiments have been made at the veterinary school at Alfort (just outside of Paris), by order of the Minister of War, to ascertain the endurance of horses, as in a besieged town for example. It appears a horse will live on water alone for five-and-twenty days; seventeen days without eating or drinking; only five days if fed but unwatered; ten days if fed and insufficiently watered.—A horse kept without water for three days, drank 104 lbs. of water in three minutes. It was found, too, that a horse taken immediately after "feed," and kept in the active exercise of the "squadron school," completely digested its "feed" in three hours; in the same time in the conscript's school its food was two thirds digested; and if kept perfectly quiet in the stable its digestion was scarcely commenced in three hours.

WIT AND WISDOM.

A man should learn to sail with all winds.

Much smoking kills live men and cures dead swine.

What kind of bar is it that opens and never shuts? Crow-bar.

What tune can make every one glad? For-tune.

"I'm off when you talk of working," as the cork said to the ginger-pop.

What Roman general do the ladies ask for in leap-year? Marius (marry us.)

A girl describes a snake as "a thing that's a tail all the way up to the head."

The young man who was forbidden the house by his sweetheart's papa, feels very much put out.

A husband can readily foot the bills of a wife, who is not ashamed to be seen footing his stockings.

Why is the Great Eastern like an Irish girl? Because one is the Maid of Erin, the other is made of iron.

It is with life as it is with coffee—he who would drink it pure must not drain it to the dregs.

Why is a fool's speech like a poor man's pocket? Because it wants sense (cents).

Time is the only commodity or gift of which every man that lives has an equal share.

Matrimonial history is a narrative of many words, but the story of love may be told in a few letters.

What is the difference between London and a man looking over a fence? Because one is over the seas and the other sees over.

A boy was asked what meekness was? He thought a moment, and said: "Meekness gives smooth answers to rough questions."

What is the difference between a blind man and a sailor in prison? Because one can't see to go and the other can't go to sea.

There's a great difference between honor and honesty; the former, it is said, exists among thieves, the latter certainly doesn't.

"This is what they call a fellow-feeling for a man," said a loafer, as a watchman was groping for him in the dark.

An exchange paper begins a forcible appeal to its delinquents with this touching sentence. "We must dan or be done."

"Excuse me, madam, but I would like to ask why you look at me so very savagely? "Oh, beg pardon sir—I took you for my husband!"

A bachelor friend of ours has left a boarding-house, in which were a number of old maids, on account of "the miserable fair set before him at the table."

Girls are too often taught in their early training and education that to get married rather than to be married is the chief object of their early years.

According to the Milwaukee News, they have a new military company in Chicago. They drill six times a week, and have now got so that they can form a straight line—by leaning against a fence.

"What object do you see?" asked the doctor. The young man hesitated for a few moments, and then replied: "It appears like a jackass, doctor, but I rather think it is your shadow."

A Yankee who had seen Power's Greek Slave, and who was asked if he was not in raptures with it, replied: "Well, to tell the truth, I don't care much about them stone gals."

Two men, strangers to each other, got into a dispute, when one of them exclaimed, threateningly: "I will let you know, sir, that I am Mr. Hodges!" "Oh, well, I am equal to several of you," said the other; "I am Mr. Hodges."

"I say, Mr. Pilot, ain't you going to start soon?" said a cockney on a steamer lying-to during a fog. "As soon as the fog clears up," replied the captain.—"Well, it's starlight over head," said the cockney. "Oh! yes, but we're not going that way," said the captain.

At Oskaloosa, Iowa, a young woman, whose husband came home drunk the other day, took down an ox-goad, and chastised him most gloriously—until he promised not to do so again. He laid the blame upon a friend who asked him to drink. She then flogged him again for not having firmness to refuse.

Boys, if you don't want to fall in love, keep away from muslin. You can no more play with those girls without losing your hearts, than you can play with gamblers without losing your money.—The heart-strings of a woman, like the tendrils of a vine, are always reaching out for something to cling to. The consequence is, that before you are going you are "gone," like a lot at an auction.

A funny lawsuit against a doctor for pulling "the wrong tooth" from a female patient, occurred at East Corinth, Mass., recently. The judge considered the accident very aggravating, particularly as the plaintiff was somewhat "short on" teeth, but saw no evidence that the doctor was at fault, and gave him a verdict. The case occasioned considerable "jaw," and was a toothsome morsel to the spectators.
