FOR MURDER OF WATERMAN

Proceedings of Fred Wall's Trial, at Tunkhannock.

MANY WITNESSES EXAMINED

Commonwealth Attorneys Endeavor to Draw the Links About the Prisoner. Abram Ide's Damaging Testimony--Story of Tragedy.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Tunkhannock, April 10.--The evidence in the Waterman murder trial, which was begun yesterday, was continued today before a large crowd of interested spectators.

James Stark, who was one of the coroner's jury, testified to examining the ground where the body was found and also the embankment to see if there were signs of anyone having fallen off the wall. He saw nothing to lead to such a belief.

James W. Platt, attorney for the defendant, suggested that the jury be taken to the spot where the body was found and allowed to examine the ground in order to better understand the testimony. A quibble immediately arose as to whether the defense intended to point out the location with the intent to produce upon the minds of the jury the result of an accident. It was finally settled by counsel on both sides agreeing not to make any explanations.

Theodore Streeter, undertaker, testified to being called up in the night, Jan. 9, 1894, and taken to the Gearhart coal chutes, where he found the body of Waterman. Described position. Found cut over left ear inch and a half long, small cracks and other wounds upon the head; blood issuing from nose and ear. Carried body to undertaking establishment. Washed body, found dirt in wounds. When body was found the wound was not in contact with the ground or dirt. Examined ground on top of wall. It was loose filling and of such a nature that I think could have discovered it if anyone had stepped upon it.

Counsel for defendant questions: Streeter--The body was brought to my establishment about 12 o'clock. I examined clothing next morning. Do not know who or how many might have handled or examined clothing. I took first called before coroner's jury and again afterward.

Prosecution questions: Found blood on handkerchief around neck and on vest. Blood on pockets of vest, like finger marks. Didn't examine clothing until body was taken to my store. Didn't find any blood on front of clothing; reason why I examined particularly was because I heard them say he had the nose bleed. There was blood on the hat. The family of the deceased asked for the clothing and had it until the day of the funeral, when I brought it home. It has been in my possession ever since. There was dirt and gravel in the wound over the ear so that I had to stretch it apart in order to wash it out. Looked as if it had come in contact with the earth. The ear was torn, as if struck a blow. Saw no other bruises on the body. Vest was buttoned, but don't think coat was. There was no money in pockets when I examined clothing. Wound over ear was dry, not bleeding. Judge the pool of blood where he was found came from the nose.

Money Found on Corpse. I. E. Wooditt recalled: I examined the body where it lay when found, in presence of Mr. Kutz. Felt inside of pockets of vest, but found nothing; found some things in pants pockets--found pocketbook. Gave it to Squire Kutz. It was closed all in proper shape. Opened it after we got over to Tom Hardings; found $2.94 in it. Found a watch, also. It was fastened to a buttonhole in the vest by a string, or slip-nose.

The bills in pocketbook were folded up nicely as though they had been there for some time. Streeter recalled--Brings vest taken from body and identifies as same, also condition is same. Counsel for defendant objects to admitting vest as evidence because it has not been in his continuous possession, and others, relatives of the deceased, had handled it. Objection sustained, but jury must judge for themselves the weight of evidence it should carry.

C. W. Waterman, widow of deceased, called and identified the clothing exhibited as the same worn by her husband when he left home the day of his death. Clothing admitted to evidence. Dr. J. W. Denison--Helped make post mortem on body of C. W. Waterman March 9, 1894. Found wound on left temple, ear torn down, and small puncture on top of head. In my opinion the wound on temple produced death. The upper edge of the wound was clean cut, the lower bruised, as though made with a blunt instrument. Think a person receiving such a blow would be rendered unconscious at once, and not able to walk. Saw pool of blood in front of Stevens' house.

Afternoon Session. Dr. Denison still on the stand--The character of the wound, as example was such that it could not bleed much. It was a contusion. The effect would be to paralyze the heart. Traced the drops of blood from the pool in front of the Stevens house diagonally across the street and down the sidewalk to a house a couple of rods below Woodman's house, then back up to the Montrose railroad crossing and down the track to point nearly opposite where the body was found, but could not trace it under the freestone to where it had lain. I made the autopsy, assisted by Drs. Bidleman, Hill and Healy. Think Dornif was there also. Found discoloration on back of neck, nose was scarified. Describes condition of front of Stevens' house; witness said he did not think Waterman received the fatal blow there. He could not have bled so much if he had. Pool of blood on blood on back of neck. It is my opinion that he did not receive the puncture of the skull at the same time that he did the wound near the ear, neither were they made by the same instrument.

WILLIAM GILROY--Was in the Stevens house on the night Waterman's dead body was found.

William Gilroy--Was in the Stevens house on the night Waterman's dead body was found. There along about 9 o'clock. Staid there probably half an hour. Was intoxicated, took a drink while there. Fred Wall was there. He and another fellow claimed they had a drunken man in the barn and had to look after him. They went out an acre or more probably half an hour. Waterman went out the front door about 9:30. Fred and his companion went out the front door also about 9:30 and 10. I left the house about 10:30. Don't think Wall was intoxicated. Heard no noise or disturbance outside.

Nelson Lohn--Was at the Stevens house on night of Jan. 8, 1894; went there about 9:30, after attending lodge. Do not think the street lamp in front of hotel was lighted. Fred Wall, Pratt and some companions were drinking over the bar inside. I saw Waterman lying on his back, lying near the coal chutes. I was at the Kesler House, and went down. Think it was about 11 o'clock.

A. W. Feldman--Was at the Stevens house on the night mentioned. Think the street lamp in front was not lighted. Charles Harding was at the Stevens house at about 9:30 on night mentioned. Staid about fifteen minutes. Saw Waterman, but not Fred Wall. Went over to the Wyoming house, found Fred Wall and Pratt there. They wanted oysters, but Tom told them he hadn't any. They had been drinking, but don't think they were very drunk. They spoke about going back to Stevens' house barn to look after Pratt's brother, who was in the barn, drunk. They were afraid he would freeze to death. Pratt was at Stevens' house when I left, but he soon came over to the Wyoming house. Waterman had a red handkerchief hanging down in front of his vest; didn't notice that he was bleeding.

Ides Damaging Story.

Abram Ide--Live next door to Stevens house. On the afternoon of Jan. 8, 1894, was working for Dr. Bidleman. Saw Waterman and others standing near Gearhart's coal office. Waterman had some money and he and the others were talking and looking at the money. Fred Wall was standing a few feet away. Saw Fred and Pratt standing near my fence about supper time. Didn't get the run of their conversation, but heard somebody say, "why didn't you hit the lamp in front of Stevens house was put out or went out between 9 and 10 o'clock. Late in the evening I went out to draw some water at the hydrant, and heard someone say "we must keep this awful still." Another of the party said "sh-h," as if to keep him still. After going into the house saw a flash of light as if someone was lighting a match. Next morning saw blood on the walk and found coupling pin, which had blood upon it, lying just back of where the men stood the night before. I went to the station to take the Montrose train to Lake Carey, where I was working. I first learned that a man had been killed while we were going up the mountain. Don't know what became of the coupling pin, never saw it again.

Next saw Fred Wall Thursday morning following. He had on new pair of overalls and jerk shirt. I remarked that there must have been a fire. He explained it by saying that Sherman Stevens had a sick horse and he got his clothes bloody, and could buy new ones as cheap as to get the old ones washed. Cross-examined--Did not mention any of these circumstances to anybody, not even my wife, until I was called before the grand jury.

Dartmouth Professors Called it Incurable.

"I had a painful ulcer on my ankle, which physicians called an old man's sore, due to the poor state of my blood. The sore spread to the size of a saucer, and I had to give up business. The surgeons at Dartmouth College would not perform an operation, claiming that my advanced age, 75 years, in itself was a barrier, and that only temporary relief could be given. I was pining over my misfortune when a friend urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had taken but part of a bottle when the eruption looked more healthy and after taking 6 bottles the sore completely healed, leaving only a scar. Hood's Sarsaparilla also helped my whole system as I have not felt so well for years." JOHN S. CURRIER, West Lebanon, N. H. Hood's Pills easy to buy, easy to take, easy in effect.
