

Glimpses of Welsh Mining Life.

Tomas Cwmniwrch on Welsh Names.

In the Canon of Mines, and near the north end of the town of Aberystwyth, there is a mining company which supplies coal to the town and to the surrounding district. This company is known as the Aberystwyth Colliery, and it has been in operation for many years. The company has a large number of employees, and its activities are regulated by a strict set of rules and regulations. The mine is well equipped with modern machinery, and its products are of high quality. The company is managed by a skilled team of engineers, and it is located in a beautiful natural setting.

Aberystwyth is a town on the west coast of Wales, and it is known for its picturesque scenery and its cultural heritage. The town is home to a number of interesting historical sites, including the Aberystwyth University, which is one of the oldest universities in Wales. The town is also known for its vibrant music and arts scene, which attracts visitors from all over the world.

---

Lady Llanover Dies at Ninety-Four.

Mabon Writes an Interesting Sketch of the Life and Work of the Great Lady.

All that and more is illustrated in the following sketch of the life and work of the great lady, Mrs. Mary Llanover. Mrs. Llanover was a Welshwoman who devoted her life to the preservation and promotion of the Welsh language, culture, and heritage. She was a strong, independent woman who was known for her kindness, wisdom, and dedication. She was a champion of the Welsh language and culture, and she worked tirelessly to promote these values in her community.

Mrs. Llanover was born in 1844, in the small town of Aberystwyth, Wales. She grew up in a family that was deeply committed to the Welsh language and culture, and she was encouraged by her parents to learn and speak Welsh from a young age. She attended a Welsh-language school, and she went on to study at the University of Wales, where she earned a degree in education.

After graduating from college, Mrs. Llanover returned to Aberystwyth, where she began teaching at a Welsh-language school. She continued to teach for many years, and she was known for her dedication to her students and her commitment to the Welsh language.

Mrs. Llanover was also deeply committed to the preservation of Welsh culture and heritage. She was a member of the Aberystwyth University, and she worked tirelessly to promote the university and its programs. She was a founding member of the Aberystwyth University Museum, and she served as its first director.

Mrs. Llanover was a leader in the Welsh literary movement, and she was known for her writing. Her works included a number of books, poetry, and essays, which were widely read and admired. She was a champion of the Welsh language and culture, and she worked tirelessly to promote these values in her community.

Mrs. Llanover died in 1936, at the age of ninety-four. She left behind a lasting legacy, and her contributions to the Welsh language and culture will be remembered for generations to come. She was a true Welshwoman, and she will be missed by all who knew her.