WILL WEAR A ROBE.

President Cleveland Fills the Vacancy on the Supreme Bench by Appointing Melville W. Fuller, of Chicago, Chief Justice—His Action Gives General Satisfaction—No Doubt of His Confirmation—Sketch of the Appointee's Career.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—President Cleveland yesterday sent to the Senate the name of Melville W. Fuller for Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. There will be no trouble about Mr. Fuller's confirmation, although the Senate will not take unbecoming haste in acting upon the nomination. It will go first to the Committee on the Judiciary, which is composed of Messrs. Edmunds, Hoar, Ingalls, Wilson (Ia.), Evarts, Pugh, Coke, Vest and George. To nearly all of these gentlemen Mr. Fuller is personally known, and no objection will be raised to him on the Republican side. The Democratic Senators do not always vote for the President's nominees, but it is not believed there is any reason for expecting opposition to Mr. Fuller.

When the nomination of Mr. Fuller as Chief Justice of the United States reached the Senate, it was immediately made the subject of general whispered conversation, and as far as could be ascertained, the comment was entirely favorable to the selection from every standpoint.

Early in the Administration of Mr. Cleveland, Mr. Fuller was tendered the Solicitor-Generalship, and subsequently positions on the Civil Service Commission, Inter-State Commerce Commission and Pacific Railroad Commission, all of which he declined. He has been held in the highest regard by the President, and has been generally indorsed by Western Democrats.

An instant cry of approval ran over the Capital when the news became public, especially among those from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin, where Mr. Fuller was particularly well-known, and Congressional and other friends of the honored Chicagoan are jubilant over the notable recognition of their favorite by the President.

The Supreme Court was in session when the news came there, and it was received with as much demonstration of pleasure as ever comes over that dignified body. Senator Edmunds, who has been Mr. Phelps' chief advocate, was pleading a case before Acting Chief Justice Miller and his associates. Even Justice Field, who, it was thought early in the talk, might possibly be promoted to the position, received the announcement pleasurably. Mr. Field later spoke highly and in complimentary terms of Mr. Fuller. Justice Lamar was also warm in the approval of the selection.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Mr. Fuller received the notice of his appointment with much greater coolness than his friends. About noon President Cleveland, by telegram, notified him that his name had been sent to the Senate for the place of Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. Other dispatches speedily followed, and the newspaper bulletins soon announced the appointment. By 1 o'clock the news had run through the courts, and the lawyers began their pilgrimages toward Mr. Fuller's office on Dearborn street. He was the recipient of many personal congratulations, his fellow-members of the bar seeming unanimous in their approval of the President's action. During the day many telegrams of a congratulatory nature were received by Mr. Fuller. Asked whether or not he would accept, he gave rather an evasive answer, preferring not to talk on the subject, but the impression was left that he would not decline the office.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Dispatches from the leading newspapers of the country give the gist of the editorials published this morning on the appointment of Melville W. Fuller to the Chief Justiceship. Summed up, the majority of the editors agree that while the appointment is a surprise, it is far from being a mistake on the part of the President, and hopes are expressed that Mr. Fuller will accept.

[Melville W. Fuller was born February 11, 1833, at Augusta, Me. He comes from the best New England stock, his ancestry dating back to the Mayflower's arrival. He graduated from Bowdoin in 1853. He then entered the law office of his uncle at Bangor, attending lectures in the law department of Harvard University. Mr. Fuller commenced the practice of his profession in his native city, also doing editorial duty on the Age, of which he was one of the editors. He was elected a member of the common council, became its president, and also acted as city solicitor at the same time. In 1856, wishing a larger field of action, he removed to Chicago and began at once a lucrative business in his profession. In 1861 he was a member of the Constitutional convention of this State and was a member of the Democratic National conventions of 1864, 1872, 1876 and 1880. His literary attainments are varied and of high order, and his public speeches are characterized by elegance of diction, eloquence and clearly-defined argument. He is a great admirer of Stephen A. Douglas, having delivered an address of welcome to him in 1860, also pronouncing his eulogy in 1861, and paying an eloquent tribute to the dead statesman at the Iroquois Club banquet in Chicago of last Monday evening. He has been twice married—in 1858 and 1866.]

A Milk-Dealer's Peculiar Loss.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 1.—Samuel Stevens, a milk-dealer residing in the adjoining town of Monroe, on going to his barn Sunday morning, found that the entire flooring of his cow-stables had given way during the night, and precipitated his ten cows into the opening. Nothing remained but the stanchions to which his stock were fastened, and from these hung ten dead cows.
