"Among the clerks in the house will be many young white women," said Taylor, "and it is an outrage that they should be compelled to work side by side with Negroes, and this house should not submit to the indignity."

TENNESSEE BAPTIST BOARD.

The special Board meeting of the Tennessee Baptists, which met in the North Third Avenue Baptist Church, was an interesting one. Several new members were added to the Board of Trustees of Roger Williams University.

MASS MEETING CALLED.

A call for a mass meeting issued this week is as follows:
It is generally admitted that the relations between the white and colored people of the South are not in all respects what they should be, and there are but few who will honestly claim that white and colored people have equal treatment before the law. There is a profound feeling among the colored people that something should be done to inaugurate an era of justice and fair play. Beyond doubt many of the ills under which the colored people suffer are removable, and will disappear when a more friendly sentiment for all worthy aspirations on the part of colored people has been developed among their white neighbors.

With a view to setting in motion forces that will eradicate suspicion and distrust between the two races and substitute therefor mutual confidence and helpfulness upon a basis of even-handed justice to all, it has been deemed wise to issue this call for a public mass meeting to assemble on Wednesday night, January 20, at 8 o'clock at the First Baptist Church, Eighth Avenue, North, Rev. W. S. Ellington, D. D., pastor.

All persons in sympathy with the object of this meeting as set forth above are invited and urged to be present.

The call is sent out by
Rev. SUTTON E. GRIGGS.

"COLORED DOLLS FOR COLORED BABIES."

The subject of "Negro Dolls for Negro Babies" is attracting considerable attention among colored people and is being discussed by some of the most prominent colored men and women in the country. In a recent issue of the "Colored American Magazine" Counselor E. A. Johnson, of New York, who was for many years dean of the law department of Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C., has a unique article, in part as follows:

"I am convinced that one of the best ways to teach Negro children to respect their own color would be to see to it that the children be given colored dolls to play with. The children do not know anything about prejudice themselves, and in most cases they prefer white dolls to colored ones, but this idea could be easily removed from their young minds by putting in their hands at the onset good-looking colored dolls. To give a negro child a white doll means to create in it a prejudice against its own color, which will cling to it through life.

"I believe we should not rear our children to hate the complexion that God has given them, and thus sow the seeds of discontent with themselves that will cause them to feel inferior all through life. A dark skin is as good as any other, providing the person who wears it is deserving. There is nothing disgraceful in black or brown. No person despises a black horse or a black chicken. A black cat is sometimes looked upon with superstition, but not prejudice. In some countries the devil is painted as white and the angels as black. It is more a matter of education than anything else that we have so much of it in America, not only among the whites, but among the colored people themselves who have been taught from infancy to hate a black face and prefer a white one. In 1891 I wrote a history of the colored children in which I said as follows: 'A more modern theory of color is that the color of the skin is a shield against the penetrating rays of the sun. Most of the birds in tropical countries are colored, while those of the Arctic circle are white. The white bear comes from the Arctic regions. The color theory was also quite popular formerly as an argument in support of the curse of Noah.' We hold that the color of the race is due to climatic influences, and in support of this view we quote in reference to Africa as follows: 'As we go westward we observe the light color predominating over the dark, and then again, when we come within the influences of the damp sea air, we find the shade deepened into the general blackness of the coast population. There are five distinct types of races. The Caucasian is white; the Mongolian is yellow; the Malay, brown; the American Indian, red; and the Ethiopian, black. The wisest of men have always been puzzled to account for these different colors of the races of mankind, all from the same common ancestry.' Let the black face hold itself up as well as any other, not in a haughty arrogant way, but in a manner that will say to the world as did Solomon of old, 'I am black but comely,' and comely may herein refer to more than simply good looks."—From the Brooklyn Standard-Union.
