

Open the Gates.

We have been suffering for weeks from the iron grip of an internal blockade, which has somewhat discommodated the wealthy citizens, who are mostly rebels, and has inflicted the severest suffering on our poor population, who are mostly loyal.

The political slave faction of the cotton States descended from sectionalism to nullification, from nullification to open rebellion, from rebellion to conscription, from conscription to the exemption of the most favored members of that very cotton aristocracy, which originally formed the basis of the political slave faction.

The phrase "crush out treason," has hitherto been interpreted figuratively. We guess the Army of the Ohio will give it a literal interpretation. Treason is rather an extravagant child to humor any longer.

General Buell's Farewell to the Army of the Ohio. HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE OHIO, LOUISVILLE, KY., Oct. 30, 1862. General Order No. 150.

A Bold and Daring Act. In the skirmish with the enemy on the Franklin Pike, Wednesday evening last, Private McCormick, of company H, (Captain Julien), of the First Middle Tennessee Cavalry, (Colonel Stokes), rode out of line one hundred yards in advance, and fired his carbine, killing a man.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

The Memphis Bulletin of the 31st ult., contains the following:

We have advices from Holly Springs to Wednesday morning. There had been no movement of forces from that point, except the transfer of Villipigne's division to Meridian.

On Wednesday morning, our informant states, about six thousand infantry and two thousand cavalry arrived, all represented as from Texas.

A gentleman who was anxious to obtain permission to bring his cotton to Memphis and exchange it for supplies for his family is reported to have made application to Gen. Van Dorn to get permission to do so.

We learn that an intense feeling of indignation and opposition has been excited among the people in the county in reference to this cotton-burning business.

The Commission found him guilty, being convinced that the prisoner was a spy, and he was unanimously condemned.

It is known to the friends of General Harney that he will return to St. Johns to wait the orders of the War Department.

An order has been issued deferring the organization of the regiment and companies of volunteer engineers, authorized by the act of July last.

The returns are as yet incomplete. A fight took place yesterday between a portion of Col. Catherwood's Sixth Cavalry, Missouri State Militia, and Quantrell.

The rebels along the State line are becoming very troublesome. They stop citizens and demand their money and personal effects, and if any remonstrance is made they are shot.

By this process, charity is done to the best advantage. I know that all our soldiers want to know in how to dispense this charity, and the above method, in my judgment, will accomplish the greatest amount of good.

Major-General Commanding. (From the Grenada (rebel) Appeal.) Petty Plundering.—A friend from Coahoma county brings us information of the outrages committed by the Federals on the plantation of Hon. Jacob Thompson, few miles below Friar's Point, on the river.

Unfavorable News.—The Richmond Examiner, of the 21st, says: "The War Department received two letters yesterday from General Bragg, which it has not been deemed consistent with the public good to lay before the people."

From the Cincinnati Commercial of the 2nd inst. Tue Movements of the Army in Virginia.

It was supposed that when the Army of the Potomac advanced, it would move by the beaten track of the Shenandoah Valley directly upon Winchester.

It is probable that Lee calculated upon such a movement, from the disposition of his forces; but instead of advancing upon Winchester directly up the Valley, Burnside's corps on the 26th commenced a movement along the eastern base of the Blue Ridge.

This movement accomplishes several desirable ends. It brings the corps of Sigel and Burnside within co-operating distance, strengthens the defense of Washington, and menaces the direct line of Lee's retreat toward Richmond.

Our advances do not indicate which purpose is in view. The left of our army is in position to do either one or the other thing; and from the fact that in Washington they were on Saturday and yesterday expecting intelligence of a great battle, it is probably understood that Burnside is to attempt a flank movement by way of Snicker's and Ashby's Gaps.
