DEMOCRATS OF NATION ENTHUSIASTIC Leaders Pleased Over Selection of Judge Hull.

Washington, D. C. Nov. 12.—(Special.)—Harmony and enthusiasm prevail in the Democratic national organization over the election of Cordell Hull as chairman of the Democratic national committee, following the voluntary retirement of Chairman George White.

Party leaders are unanimous in approval and declare that in Chairman Hull the party has the greatest possible individual asset and constructive leadership, and that this election is especially appropriate at this time, when taxation and other economic matters are outstanding issues and when the Republican party is leaderless and without a program. They point out that his election not only produces complete harmony within the organization, but that it will tend to harmonize and co-ordinate the various elements in the rank and file, resulting in party solidarity, so necessary to the successful conduct of political campaigns.

What follows may be regarded generally as the Democratic estimate of Chairman Hull: the statements of facts herein is a matter of official record:

Perhaps no other available Democrat could have been selected to direct the national organization who would be so widely approved by the financial, industrial commercial and general business world as Mr. Hull. For fourteen years he has been in a conspicuous factor in legislation touching the business life of the nation, and on all questions of financial, commercial and economic affairs he has always been considered practical and fair by all legitimate classes of business.

As author of the income tax law, declared constitutional and upheld generally by the Supreme Court, the Federal inheritance tax law, legislation to stabilize the value of liberty bonds and of much of the reconstruction legislation following the war, Judge Hull has left indelible and valuable contributions upon the Federal statutes.

In connection with the framing and handling of legislation since the Democratic party came into power in 1912, Judge Hull has come in contact with all classes of business men throughout the country. In 1917 he presided over the board in the treasury department which prepared the regulations designed to make the war revenue act more equitable and efficient in its administration, eliminating technical and harsh construction, thus preventing confusion among officials and hardships to the taxpayer. Many of these saving regulations were incorporated in the revenue act of 1918.

ALWAYS PROGRESSIVE.

As a politician and as a national legislator Judge Hull has never been an extremist, but always a progressive. He has always taken into account the social and moral as well as the material welfare of the nation. In his vote and in his public utterances he has never expressed any class or sectional bias.

In his long career in congress Judge Hull had not only the respect and confidence of his party colleagues but of the Republicans as well. A prominent Republican congressman recently said to the writer that, of all the members who were not re-elected at the last election, none was so seriously missed on both sides of the house as Judge Hull. "Whenever he spoke," continued this member, "we Republicans all sat up and listened and we took heed, for he always held the view that taxation, the tariff and economic legislation generally were matters that never should be dealt with in a partisan spirit, but should be considered upon a scientific basis for the general welfare of the government and the people alike."

Perhaps no finer tribute in epitome could be paid the new chairman than was paid him by Senator Glass, who placed him in nomination:

GLASS' TRIBUTE.

"He is one of the wisest and soundest of Democrats, a man of almost unerring judgement, a man of great patience and courage, a man of admirable poise and above all a Democrat grounded in the fundamental principles of his party in which in all of my observations I have never known him to deviate a hair's breadth."

An additional tribute was paid him by the Democratic members of the present house in resolutions passed on the day following his election as chairman, which after citing his patriotism, statesmanship, knowledge of political history and politics, and his elements of leadership, contained the following:

"Knowing his personal character, unselfish devotion to his country and his ability as a leader disclosed during his long service in this house, with confidence in the success of his leadership, we pledge to him, as to our fellow Democrats throughout the nation, our united support."

The universal character of Judge Hull's mind was effectively displayed in a recent article from his pen on the "Economic Consequences of the Defeat of the Peace Treaty," widely published in the leading papers of the country and incorporated in the congressional record. In this great contribution to post-war literature, citing an economic loss of $40,000,000, as one of the results, a veritable cyclopedia of statistics and logically deduced facts, he displayed a grasp and understanding not only of economic conditions and principles as they exist in this country, but as they exist and are related to the world at large.

EQUIPMENT FOR WORK.

His equipment for the practical work of politics has been tested and proved as a member of the executive committee and as a participant in congressional and presidential campaigns.

Beginning his public life as a member of the Tennessee legislature, he was later elected Judge of the Fifth Judicial district of Tennessee, followed by his election to congress from the Fourth district in 1906 and his re-election to each succeeding congress except the present one. In the last campaign he unselfishly gave his services to other congressional districts than his own.

He served in the Spanish-American war as captain of company H. Fourth Tennessee regiment, with the same modesty and fidelity as in every other position to which he has been called.

As a state legislator, as a judge, as a soldier, as a congressman, as a political leader and as a man he has always displayed those qualities which command respect, inspire confidence and insure the fealty of his followers.

There is every evidence already that he is going to have the hearty co-operation of members of the national committee and party leaders throughout the country and that the rank and file of the party will follow his militant leadership in the true militant spirit of democracy. — Nashville Banner.

C. H. SCHOOL NOTES.

The Parents-Teacher Association met Wednesday afternoon. A very interesting program was rendered.

The music class is doing fine work. Those deserving special mention in class work last week are: Mayme Gipson, Marjorie Johnson, Margaret Haile, Ara Meadows, Amanda Fame Brown, Alice E. Tardy.

A match game of basketball was played here Saturday afternoon between Gainesboro and Granville—both boys and girls. The score in the girls game, was 12 to 4 in favor of Granville. Granville boys won 18 to 12.

Although this report of team is not very bright, Gainesboro is not to be defeated always, for we are getting more practice and will soon be willing to play any team in the county.

The cooking class is preparing a play, "The Rainbow Kimonas," for presentations sometime before Christmas. The proceeds will go to the cooking department.

The school celebrated Armistic day with a short program held in the auditorium of the school building, Friday morning. The most interesting feature, was the address delivered by Judge Gardenhire of Carthage. Besides the students, there were many present from town.

We are all busy preparing for the monthly tests to come at the end of this week.

RED CROSS WORKING FOR HEALTHIER U. S.

Thousands Aided by Instruction in Care of the Sick, Food Selection and First Aid.

How the American Red Cross guides thousands of persons to health is shown in a summary of the society's activities in the health field based upon the annual report for the last fiscal year. Through its Nursing Service, its Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick courses, nutrition classes, First Aid classes, Life-Saving classes and Health Centers and in numerous other ways designed to acquaint masses of citizens with proper methods of living, the Red Cross carried its message of health into all parts of the country.

The work of the Red Cross during the war in its traditional field of nursing, furnishing the military and naval establishments of the nation with 19,877 nurses, is well known. And there are today 37,737 nurses registered with the American Red Cross and subject to call in emergency. During the fiscal year, 1,551 Red Cross nurses were accepted for assignment to Government service, 388 by the Army and Navy and 1,163 by the United States Public Health Service.

In addition to the nurses enrolled by the Red Cross for Government service, the Red Cross itself employed a total of 1,348 public health nurses in the United States and Europe. By far the greatest number was employed in the United States, 1,257, while 81 were in foreign service.

Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick classes, giving thorough instruction in the proper care of the sick in instances where the illness is not so serious as to require professional nursing care, during the fiscal year numbered 5,176. A statistical picture of the Red Cross operations in this field follows:

New classes formed during year 5,176
Classes completed during year. 6,299
New students enrolled 101,068
Students completing course.... 73,488

What the Red Cross accomplished in giving proper instruction through its Nutrition Service is indicated by the following table:

New classes formed during year 143
Classes completed during year.. 196
New students enrolled 2,241
Students completing course.... 2,018

In addition to the above, a total of 22,008 children were given instruction in the proper selection and preparation of foods.

Through its 260 Health Centers, the Red Cross reached 90,252 persons. In these Health Centers, 4,015 health lectures were given and 780 health exhibits held.

In the United States last year, 75,482 persons were killed and 8,500,000 injured in industrial accidents. To prevent this enormous waste the Red Cross held 5,100 first aid classes with a total of 104,000 students enrolled.

Red Cross Trains 147 Blind Vets In Useful Work

Training designed to fit them for the battle of life was taken by 147 blinded ex-service men at the Red Cross Institute for the Blind, near Baltimore, Md., during the fiscal year 1920-1921, according to the report of the Institute for that period.

Of this number, 19 have gone on to other institutions, in almost every case to institutions where those having sight are receiving advanced education. The blind ex-service men who have entered such institutions are provided with special text-books in Braille, reading which they were taught at the Red Cross Institute.

Twelve men have passed from the Institute to successfully carry on some occupation or business for which they were fitted by special training. A few have withdrawn from the Institute because of poor physical condition, 14 are receiving further "training on the job" and 87 are still in training.
