

THE HON. HENRY WATTERSON.

THE KENTUCKY EDITOR'S ADDRESS TO THE GRADUATES OF THE HIGH SCHOOL.

THE DAWNING OF THE NEW DAY.

An Emphatic Conclusion Against Women's Suffrage Drawn By the Speaker.

Louisville, Ky., Dispatch: Hon. Henry Watterson, editor of the Courier-Journal, delivered the address to the graduates of the Female High School here to-day. After a graceful introduction the speaker said:

"I have always rejected the conceit that the man is the oak and the woman the vine. That is a figure of the very vain, one-sided and masculine imagery. The woman is the man's prop and support, as the man is the woman's physical shield and buckler, and neither could dispense with the other. Happily for both this view of the case has made some progress in modern ethics and among civilized nations that we seem to have reached the border land of a new world, which promises to unravel the tangled web of human error and to solve the Old World's problem of the sexes.

"That in the worst of times woman was a power, we know; but she was not always a power for good. It may be doubted whether upon the romantic and sentimental side her force as an inspiration has been increased with her emancipation from feudal bonds and limitations. But there can be no doubt that the striking away of the shackles that restricted her movement has greatly enlarged her personal influence and intellectual position, creating a new and potent presence by the very act which annihilated a phantom of the dark ages. I cannot believe that any man was ever the weaker for having in his wife an intellectual equal, and to the point of that intellectual equality I would educate the woman. The point at which I would mark a distinction between them and draw the educational line is solely and purely a moral point.

"It is my firm conviction that no human being was ever benefited by familiarity with depravity. And I would, as far as possible, keep our women out of a knowledge of the depraved side of human nature and human conduct. I do not mean to argue that point, but I am satisfied that their happiness as well as their domestic usefulness will be proportioned to their ignorance of vice and sin. God grant that these dear girls may never know what I know and what all men know of the wickedness which the great cities of the world evolve and exude."

From this promise Mr. Watterson drew an emphatic conclusion against women's suffrage.

He said the proper ideal should always be womanly women and manly men. He said:

"I don't want to see my women loafing around the polls and sitting up at night with the returns of the elections, not because I would deny them any right, but because, as far as my observation goes, that sort of thing is of questionable value to the development of male character, and can certainly not contribute much to enrich the store of female virtue. To you, young ladies, who think that you have just finished your education, but who are really just beginning it, let me say first, last and all the time, don't be in a hurry. The world is all before you; take your time in determining what you are going to do in life.

"There is a prevailing idea very creditable in itself, but still a fad, that no girl should marry to get a living, to be taken care of or to escape poverty. To the extent that this means that every woman should be exempt from dependence on anybody, I readily subscribe to it. Every woman should be in her own person independent; it is no more of a disgrace for a woman to earn her living by honest work than it is a disgrace for a man to earn his living by the same process."

"But in the nature of the case a great majority of women will marry, and ought to marry and in my injunction—don't be in a hurry—applies here as elsewhere. Don't be in a hurry to get a lover; don't be in a hurry to get a husband, the woods are full of them."

The address concluded as follows: "Let me, in closing, congratulate you on the honors you have won in school; rejoice with you that the tucks are about to come out of your dresses; anticipate with you and yourselves the beauty and the glory of your completed womanhood.

"The school-room fades into the shadow of the roof-tree, the roof-tree into the midst of dreamland. The new day dawns with its high hopes and bright tints; may it be a long and happy day to each and every one of you."

The Richmond and Danville.

Danville (Va.) Register, June 17th. Whatever the plans of the Richmond and Danville people may be in acquiring the Danville and New River road, we do not know, but we believe, as many others do, that it is a step towards a road to the west from Danville.

In the first place, there was evidently some urgent reason for compromising Danville's claim, for had the Richmond and Danville simply wanted to operate the Danville and New River as a narrow gauge, it could just as well have done so with the road in the hands of a receiver. A few people who have looked well into the matter really believe that Danville would have won her suit in the United States Supreme Court. Unless, therefore, the Richmond and Danville people are far more liberal than they are reputed to be, they had, we repeat, some urgent reason for getting the Danville and New River out of the hands of a receiver—in short this looks very like the Richmond and Danville people want to broaden the gauge of the road and utilize it in giving them a western line. The fact that the road will be bonded at $15,000 a mile, and that the interest on these bonds is guaranteed by the Richmond and Danville, is another indication that the gauge will be broadened, as we have already observed.

But again, there is abundant reason why the Richmond and Danville should have a road from Danville to Bristol.

Look, if you please, at a map of Virginia and North Carolina. You will find that the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad, one of the finest roads of the South, terminates at Bristol. This road is owned by the Richmond and Danville, but having no outlet, except by way of Asheville, N. C., it is forced to jump its immense business into the lap of the Norfolk and Western, a rival and antagonistic corporation. More than that, the Richmond and Danville has no coal of any consequence on its entire system of road, and this road to Bristol would put the Richmond and Danville in the coal fields and give an outlet for the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia. The road would pass through a country which is rich in minerals, timbers and agricultural products, and Mr. James B. Pace told the writer two years ago that such a line would, in his opinion, be the best paying railroad property in the South.

Now look at your map. The Richmond and Danville has practically completed its line from Winston to Wilkesboro, N. C., and the distance from Wilkesboro to Bristol is only about sixty miles. A new line has already been surveyed from Danville to Winston and the Danville and New River to Cascade, and the line from that point to Leasville will put the Richmond and Danville far on its way to Winston, so that in order to get a line from Danville to Bristol, the Richmond and Danville has only to build from Leasville to Winston and from Winston to Bristol. When this line is completed, the gauge of the Danville and New River could be broadened to Martinsville, where it would connect with the Roanoke and Southern, and the line from Martinsville to Stuart could be operated at small cost as feeder to the main line.

This seems to be the inevitable plan of the Richmond and Danville, and it is plain that such a line would be of great advantage to Danville. It would not merely give the western road for which she has so long prayed, but would make Danville, in all probability, the cooling station of the Richmond and Danville and one of the most important centres of its great system of roads.

Two years ago, in referring to this matter, we remarked that such a line as we have now described would be a God-send to Danville, and were severely criticised for expressing an opinion favorable to the Richmond and Danville line, but we now believe, as we believed then, that its construction will be the beginning of a new era of prosperity for the thrifty and growing city of Danville.

Shameful Gift-Taking.

Chicago Herald. John Wannamaker's gift of a $20,000 cottage at Cape May to Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and the latter's prompt acceptance of the gratuity easily make up the most shameful incident of an administration that has been more disgraceful and scandalous than anything the country has seen since the second term of Grant.

It is bad enough that John Wannamaker, who raised a gigantic corruption fund in 1888, should have been paid for his services by an appointment to the Cabinet, but it is even worse that he should characterize his official career by making such gifts to the wife of the man who placed him, and that his insulting generosity should be accepted without a blush. With this wretched example in high places, we may look for a speedy revival of gift-giving and gift-taking. It is an easy descent from cottages by the sea to bull pups and packages of greenbacks.

The tone of the Harrison administration was pitched lower than that of any other within the memory of the present generation. It entered the office bound and gagged by the corrupt and vicious elements of the party. It has gone speedily from bad to worse. The gift-taking stage has now been reached. A year more and we shall hear of offices, a safe burglary or two, and probably a Credit Mobilier and a

Entirely Too Expert. Nashville Banner. The Memphis Democrat says the growth of the Patterson vote in the tables of estimates published by the appeal is most remarkable. These tables are compiled, says the Democrat, in the Nashville American office to boom Patterson, and every time a new table is published more figures are taken from the Baxter column to add to Josiah's imaginary majority. Says the Democrat: "But note the curious coincidence. Patterson's vote steadily climbs up in the Appeal's tables. Take Hamilton county, for instance. After it had held its convention the Chattanooga Times declared that of the forty-four votes of that county Baxter would receive at least thirty, Patterson would get about ten and Buchanan four. In its Monday table the appeal divides the forty votes between Baxter and Patterson. In this morning's table it takes away five more of Baxter's votes and gives them to Patterson, leaving Baxter only ten votes from Hamilton, though the Chattanooga Times declared that Baxter was the choice of about four-fifths of the Hamilton delegation. The table bureau is entirely too expert."

TWO TALES.

A Sensational Rumor Followed by the Truth.

Special to News and Courier. COLUMBIA, June 16.—The Evening Record published the following sensational item, which is given for what it may be worth: "From excellent authority it was learned this morning that Mr. David Risley, a citizen of Georgetown, has instituted a suit in the court of Massachusetts against the Massachusetts and Southern Construction Company of Boston, Mass., which has the management of the Three C's railroad in charge.

"It appears that Mr. Risley was the original promoter of the road known now as the Three C's and owned most of the materials of the concern; that he employed R. A. Johnson, of Saugus, Mass., to form a syndicate and secure the capital wherewith to build the road. He went on to Washington in 1884 and met Col. Johnson in company with E. Howard. The latter represented himself to be the agent of the Massachusetts and Southern Construction Company, its treasurer and a director. He represented the capital as $250,000, cash paid up, and gave references as to himself.

"The reference being satisfactory, Mr. Risley entered into an agreement with Howard, as agent of the Construction Company, on the 29th day of February, 1884, and by it Mr. Risley transferred all values he possessed connected with the road, including the franchise, worth $2,000,000. After the company had secured this the agreement was repudiated, and it is claimed that Howard was not the company's authorized agent. Hence comes the suit.

"Eminent legal counsel are on both sides, and the case will be tried in the court of Massachusetts. Gen. B. F. Butler and D. C. Trecothick, both of Boston, have been retained for plaintiff, while Benjamin Johnson, a son of the manager, and a Mr. Riney will represent the defendants.

"The addenda amounts to $2,000,000. The report goes that the company had not one dollar of legally paid up capital, and that Col. Johnson and Howard obtained the transfer fraudulently. The parties swearing to the capital being paid in when the agreement was made: E. Howard, Charles Whittier, Edwin P. Metcalf and Hiram P. Blaisdell.

THE APPLICATION OF MR. RISLEY.

Columbia Register, June 17. The following dispatch, published in a Charleston paper three days ago, shows that the alleged news of the suit of David Risley is somewhat stale and not altogether accurate:

"Boston, June 13.—The Supreme Court has denied the application of David Risley, of Georgetown, S. C., to be allowed to increase the amount in a suit he had brought against the Massachusetts and Southern Construction Company.

"Risley sued to recover $100,000 damages for alleged loss of prospective profits on a certain contract, upon which the defendant company denies any accountability. Risley applied to the court for leave to increase his demand to $1,250,000. After several days' consideration, the court dismissed the motion as sensational."

The Kind of a Man Needed.

Tennessee needs a governor who will prove himself a straight-out Democrat, and one who will bear in mind that political friends are better in politics than other considerations. We need a governor who will so conduct the affairs of the state that the finances will be improved, thereby keeping the state from continually borrowing money to pay interest on the bonded indebtedness. We need a man who will remember that the resources of Tennessee demand constant improvement and unremitting labor and attention, in order that development may be rapid and safe. We believe Mr. Jere Baxter is the man to so conduct our affairs, and we believe he should be nominated at the hands of the Democrats.

Arsenic and Potash Three Times a Day for Twenty-Five Years.

I have been taking S. S. S. (Swift's Specific), and feel it to be my duty to state its results, that others that are similarly affected may profit by my experience, and be relieved of their sufferings. I had suffered for a long, long time with what the doctors called Herpes, an eruption of the skin, forming scales and blotches which was horrible to endure. Under the advice of physicians I took 90 drops of Fowler's Solution of Arsenic every day for 25 years, besides many other kinds of medicines, without a cure. I have taken S. S. S. for about two months, and the eruption and unpleasant symptoms have all disappeared, and I am continuing it to completely root it out of my blood, which I am confident it will do; and what it has done for me I am sure it will do for others, for there are thousands of such cases all over the country which resist all other treatment. I have lived here in my present condition for 22 years.

A Large Size Straw.

A casual glance at a newspaper will show, an exchange very truthfully remarks, a list of men who helped to build up a town. If you see a good sized, live advertisement in the paper by each of the principal merchants, and a card from each of the small ones, you need not inquire as to the prosperity of the town—it's sold. But if you find the most extensive merchants not advertising their business, then you set it down as a fact that those who do try to push their business and the town with its interests have a hard time and an up-hill journey all the year round.

A man who has practiced medicine for forty years ought to know salt from sugar. Read what he says:

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 10, 1887.—Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most forty years and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times, and its effect is wonderful, and would say, in conclusion, that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Represents All Classes.

Baxter is a general favorite with business men all over the state, and at present seems to be the most popular candidate. He is making a straightforward, manly canvass, and although a rich man, cannot be truthfully accused of monopolistic tendencies. He is a member of the Farmers' Alliance, and is being endorsed by the progressive, thinking farmer element. The Tribune will support the nominee of the party, and will not have very much to say about the candidates until after the convention meets. We believe the sentiment in this county is divided between Buchanan and Baxter, but while the former is the special candidate of one element, the latter is a man upon whom all classes can consistently unite, and our county will be apt to instruct for him, if they instruct their delegates at all.

A Lady's Perfect Companion.

It clearly proves that any woman may become a mother without suffering any pain whatever. It also tells how to overcome and prevent morning sickness and the many other ailments attending pregnancy. It is highly endorsed by physicians everywhere as the wife's true and perfect companion. Cut this out: it will save you great pain and possibly your life. Gaining Every Day.

Baxter is gaining new strength every day. Men who were vigorously opposed to him in the beginning are now among his warmest supporters. The people are beginning to realize in him that they have a man after their hearts, and one who will ever have the interests of Tennessee and her people first in mind.

The Story of a Fashionable Girl.

He sees her coming down the street— A fair, sweet girl, with dainty grace; He smiles at first, yet when they meet He bows with angry, scornful face. And she—her pale cheeks flush with red. Startled to find herself so named: Then haughtily she lifts her head— Gully she is, but unashamed. Gully—and yet she loves her well! He knows her face like the very moon. Now, what has wrought the evil spell That fills his loving heart with scorn? He is her brother—yet his eyes Send forth disdainful looks that hurt; Her brother—judge of his sorrows! To find her wearing his new shirt!— [Hillsboro Dispatch.]

He Found the Schoolmaster.

New York Sun. We were sitting on the veranda of a hotel at Niagara Falls, when I noticed the man on my right looking sharply at the man on my left, and presently he got up in an excited way and walked about. After a bit he halted before the other man and asked: "Isn't your name Graham?" "Yes, sir," was the prompt reply. "Didn't you used to teach school at Elmira?" "Yes, sir." "In 1863?" "Yes, sir." "Do you remember a boy named Godkin?" "Very distinctly, sir."

"Do you remember he put a package of firecrackers under his desk and touched them off?"

"As if it happened only yesterday." "And you basted him for it?" "I did. I licked him until he could hardly stand, and I've always been glad of it."

"You have eh?" said the other, breathing fast and hard. "Do you know that that boy swore a terrible oath?"

"I presume he did, as he was a thorough young villain." "He swore an oath that he would grow up and hunt for you and pound you within an inch of your life." "But I haven't heard from him yet." "You hear from him now! He stands before you! I am that boy!" "Well!" "Prepare to be licked! My time has come at last!"

He made a dive for the old pedagogue, but the latter evaded him, made a half turn and bit him on the jaw, and Godkin went over a chair in a heap. Then the whim schoolmaster piled on to him and licked him until he cried "Enough," and it didn't take him over three minutes to do it. Then he retired to get on another collar and replace some buttons, and I helped Godkin up and observed:

"You didn't wait long enough, I guess." "Say! That's where I made a mistake!" he replied. "I see now that I ought to have held off until he had got to be about 150 years old. The old devil is all of 70 now, but he licked me right off the reel, and I'll never have the sand to stand up to him again. Here's thirty years of vengeance knocked into a cocked hat in three minutes."

A New Position Created on the East Tennessee System.

Chattanooga Times. A few days ago a dispatch to the Times from Knoxville stated that General Manager Carroll, of the Queen and Crescent Railroad, was about to be succeeded by W. A. Vaughan, at present Superintendent of the Signal and Mackinac division of the Michigan Central Railroad. The report was subsequently denied.

A Times reporter learned last night that the foundation of the rumor lay in the fact that Mr. Vaughan was to be made General Superintendent of the entire East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia system.

There seems to be little question as to the truth of the report. The general superintendency of the East Tennessee system—there being no such office now—will undoubtedly mean the general superintendency of the system when the Cincinnati Southern and Alabama Great Southern divisions of the Queen and Crescent are under control of the East Tennessee. Mr. Vaughan is a resident of Bay City, Mich., and is a railroad of large and wide experience. It is said he was recommended to the position by President H. B. Ledyard, of the Michigan Central.

Mr. Vaughan, it is said, will assume his new duties on July 1.

All Booh.

Memphis Scimitar. This talk about Benton McMillin being a "dark horse" candidate for Governor is all booh. Every two years some fellow with a wild, lurid, political imagination starts the report that McMillin is secretly longing to be Tennessee's chief executive, and thus creates a sensation. The truth is, however, McMillin doesn't want the office. He would be foolish if he did. He has been in Congress long enough to make himself a power, and he is now on the verge of a national reputation and second to that of Mr. Carlisle. He would be doing himself great injustice to leave his present field.

Preparations are being made to take out a part of the big redwood tree for the purpose of exhibition at the World's Fair in 1893. The tree is 90 feet in circumference and 35 in diameter. The section to be taken will be 9 feet in height and 60 in circumference. The work of felling the tree has already begun, and it will take ten men two months to complete all the work to be done.
