

WEATHER-CROP BULLETIN.

Little Change in the General Condition of Crops.

The following bulletin has been issued in the office of the Tennessee weather and crop service for the week ending Monday.

During the past week good and seasonable showers fell over the greater portion of the State, and where they fell growing and unmaturing crops were materially revived and benefited.

Where reasonable rains have fallen, reports show a fair condition of maturity and prospective yield, although the crop was considerably shortened by the dry weather during August.

The condition of late corn has been improved where the rains fell during the week, and in some places, a fair crop is assured, generally, however, the August drouth very seriously injured the prospects of this crop.

Early corn was also injured to some extent, but no reports of anything very serious are received. During the dry period in August, tobacco began to fire rapidly and to ripen prematurely, causing considerable loss in production.

In the eastern division reports of the condition of all crops continue favorable. There has been little or no serious lack of sufficient rain in this section as in others, consequently crops are in fine condition generally.

In the central division rains have been more or less partial, and some sections have been blessed, while others, adjoining, have felt the effects of a disastrous drouth. This is true also in the western division. In the central portions rains have been timely, but in some of the western counties crops have suffered for want of sufficient moisture.

Late crops of Irish potatoes were much improved where sufficient rain fell, and sweet potatoes are reported maturing well.

Sorghum has maintained a good condition and is still reported excellent. Cutting for syrup and for winter forage has begun.

A great deal of corn fodder was lost by rapid firing during the dry period, still a considerable proportion was saved. Late hay was saved under rather favorable conditions, and large quantities of millet and other forage crops have been stored away for winter feeding.

Pastures were much improved by the rain.

Fruit drying has been carried on to a large extent throughout the State, mostly under very favorable conditions.

Plowing for fall seeding of wheat and other cereals has progressed well where the ground was kept in suitable condition by the rains.

A CENTENNIAL SUGGESTION.

A Nashville gentleman offered a centennial suggestion last week worthy of consideration. "I have always taken a deal of interest in agricultural matters," he remarked to a reporter, "and I think the centennial might be used as a most excellent medium of advertising the advantages Tennessee offers for agricultural pursuits, provided the proper plan is adopted. Now, I think it would be an excellent idea to have a department in the centennial devoted exclusively to the farming interests of the State.

Suppose, for instance, that we have as one of the exhibits in agricultural hall a miniature farm, on which the principle crops of the State could be displayed as they grow. I think it would make a most interesting exhibit to have little plots ten feet square planted in tobacco, wheat, cotton and other crops adapted to this section, so that visitors from a distance may see what we can grow here. I think a miniature farm of that character would be a great attraction."

LITERARY NOTES.

The Book of the Fair is the only work in any wise attempting to reproduce in print the World's Columbian Exposition entire. In this respect it is without a competitor, and a perusal of the book and a look at its handsome illustrations will be the next best thing to seeing the fair itself. It confines itself neither to art alone on the one side, nor to dry statistics on the other, but it presents in attractive and accurate form the whole realm of art, industry, science and learning, as exhibited by the nations at the fair, and the work, like the fair itself, is magnificent. Many books on the great exposition have been published in the past eighteen months, and THE CHRONICLE has persistently declined to lend its columns in praise of any of the various publications purporting to describe and illustrate the World's Fair, but we do not hesitate to commend the Book of the Fair as a meritorious publication; every number is a veritable art gallery, and from a literary and artistic standpoint the work is above criticism. Published by the Bancroft Company, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill.

DOWN IN THE EIGHTH.

Already There Seems to be Some Trouble Brewing.

(Nashville American.)

The talk is that there is likely to be an exceedingly lively political period down in the Eighth Congressional District next year. There will be a hot fight over the Democratic nomination, as there are a number of able aspirants, but the hot-test fight will be for the empty honor of leading the Republican hosts to defeat.

That aspiring Republican, Congressman John E. McCall, will by no means have a sure thing for the Republican nomination. A goodly number of the "rads" in the Eighth district did not think that McCall was entitled to the nomination last year. Thrasher, who opposed Gus Enloe in 1892, thought that he should have been given another chance. Others have persuaded themselves that their country needs them at Washington.

There is Senator Jeffreys, who, from a Republican standpoint, acquitted himself with distinction in the last session of the last legislature. He pleased his constituents by striving to carry out the promises made by his party in such matters as the fee bill, of which he was the author and champion, and by jumping onto and trying to stamp out of existence the poll-tax law and the Dorth election and registration laws.

His friends also claim that it was by his exertions that the rearrangement of his Congressional district and several senatorial districts was prevented. Besides being a strong party man—therefore solid with the "rads"—Jeffreys is a good mixer and a fine manager of a political contest. On the whole it appears that it is very doubtful if the vociferous and frenzied McCall will be allowed to wag the Republican banner next year in that district unopposed.
